Our lives here at Andover surge forward like rafts on the currents of fervent rapids. Time flies by – in the blink of the eye, Juniors have become Seniors, and it seems like you never have enough time to get to know the senior class before it graduates and disperses to the far corners of the world. All too often, we are swept away – by the scores of academic opportunities and requirements, by the myriad of clubs and organizations, by the flurry of activities and events on weekends and at night, or simply by the need to lie down and relax. Every way we turn, there are more things to do, more places to go, more people to meet... it is too easy to forget who we are while we try to become who we are trying to be. Before too long, we cannot remember what we used to be like.

We are all connected in two ways: the here and the now. Here – we have all chosen to be at Phillips Academy; now – we all share this one year from 2005 to 2006. From the moment a new student is terrified by the screaming Blue Keys waving in a technicolor blob on the corner of Salem and Main streets to the moment a four-year Senior steps onto the sun-drenched vista on graduation day, every single day we are being yet again redefined. We grow as individuals, but with the traditions that we all learn and the ordeals that we all go through, part of ourselves is being defined by the Andover experience. We watch with wistful eyes as the bell tower rises from the ground yet again through rain and shine. We cheer as the magnificent Big Blue combats squalid Exonian teams on the fields and courts. We applaud the Senior class as it walks down the aisle of the Chapel and the incoming class as they march to matriculation. We cheer in exhilaration when we see a certain field hockey

6 stick enter Commons on a desolate winter night, and we sigh in frustration when we wake up on a cloudless Saturday morning and sadly get ready for class. We complain about the food, but we eat it regardless.

It is in these common experiences that our fondest memories will find themselves. We are all changing, and soon we will leave our old selves in the past. In the midst of the forever-changing hubbub that is life at PA, a dedicated handful of us have chosen to chronicle our lives and our stories during this one year – what we eat, where we hang out, what we do for fun. With this year's Pot Pourri, let us not lose ourselves in the future or the past. Let us remember who we are – right here, right now.

Fall term is here and the weather's getting cold. Tiny Juniors model bulky blue PA hoodies while Uppers and Seniors stroll with hands in pockets and bluish feet in leather flip-flops. The different classes react to life at Andover in their own ways. The Juniors, still not sure of themselves, form giant packs and swarm in Ryley and around Commons tables, eating far too much frozen yogurt and squeaking at each other in odd high voices. Lowerers are smug in their new status; they exude übercool as they strut from Bartlet and Day Hall to Life Issues and Chem 250. Less self-conscious and generally less-awake are the Uppers, who collectively have yet to sleep through the night. They will soon be drinking only caffeinated beverages and eating sandwiches prepared by Marisola with extra love and extra mayo. And then there are the Seniors. The Class of 2006 asserts its superiority by cutting the lines at Commons, at Blaine's, and at the bathrooms. We don't take no for an answer, and we stumble through the library in twos or threes mumbling our mantras over and over: "Yale, Stanford, Cornell... Yale, Stanford, Cornell."

In the evening, life revolves around the library and the dorm. A student can sit for hours at a desk in his room or in the library talking with friends, absorbing his schoolwork through the wonderful process of osmosis, whereby just touching the book will transfer its contents directly into the student's brain. Unfortunately, some of the school's librarians haven't yet grasped this concept, and for the first time in memory Garver Room has become silent, marked by gigantic stop signs at every entrance. Enraged slackers have responded unanimously by doing even less work than before.

On weekends the classes unite for good times in Ryley, in dorms and off campus. Mid-term weekend a psychic husband and wife pair showcased their talents in Tang, and half the student population promptly entered therapy. On Tuesdays the hockey team cleans out Papa Gino's All-You-Can-Eat night, and on Wednesdays the Fuess Commanders chow down on pound-heavy hamburgers at Fuddruckers. In between all this commotion we still find time to log onto Facebook.com, watch the remodeled NHL, and worry about whether Kristin and Stephen on Laguna Beach will be able to work through their differences next week.

The things we'll remember best about Phillips Academy are the funniest moments. A knockout punch in the boxing ring at Quad Day; mud sliding; streaking through freshman English classes - these are the things that will make up what we think of as our PA experience. When we're old and gray and come waddling back to our 30th reunion what matters won't be the math tests or the English papers. What will matter will be the friends we've made, the places we've gone, and the crazy things we've done.

brilliant beginnings

The few and the privileged would soon become the young and the terrified, as Andover's matriculating Class of 2005 was welcomed by the sound of honking cars and an uproar of noise. They were also greeted by screaming and jumping Blue Keys on the corner of Main and Salem as they arrived on campus. Among these new students, 18 were from New Orleans, who were displaced by the tragic hurricane Katrina. Over the next few days, the Blue Keys would lead all the new kids through Orientation 2005, which Blue Key Head Fahad Missmar '06 proudly declared as "the best yet" and "extremely well organized." The events began with a tour of the campus 'hot' spots, followed by the ropes course, the Thinkfast trivia game, matriculation, and of course, the exciting Midnight March! The incoming students got a chance to make new friends and absorb some of the contagious school spirit the Blue Keys exuded.

Weather wise, the first weekend of the 2005-2006 school year, September 16-17, was quite dreary. It was overcast and rainy, weather that usually induces glumness and sleep. But this weekend, there was no mistaking the energy that emanated from inside the buildings on campus. Excitement was contagious. No student was too busy with work to socialize or take part in the were built, and the new PA community began to form.

For the Phillips Academy Class of 2006, however, the community seemed different. This time, returning to school meant being the oldest and acquiring the coveted status of a campus leader. Stylishly dressed, Seniors proudly flaunted their seniority at the annual Senior Faculty Dinner. Two days later, the selling and yelling under the sun

Shouts, screams, and serenades rang throughout the day as the various dorms of West Quad North and South raised money at the annual Quad Day the first weekend of the school year. Booths ranged from Taylor Hall's traditional but always-popular kissing booth to various plants and jewelry from Adams Hall. Special experiences included a serenade from the boys of the Andover Cottage while sitting in a massage chair and getting "lei-d" by the girls of Johnson Hall. Some students like Steve Loeffler '07 found this year's Quad Day to be "marvelous" and "a deeply emotional and spiritual experience," while others found it to be somewhat disappointing. As Mary Grinton '07 and Parag Khandelwal '06 explained, "It's kind of lame this year with no milk chugging contest or no slip & slide." Nevertheless, the sunny weather and various inflatable carnival attractions, including a boxing ring, managed to put smiles on the faces of kids from all clusters.

a family affair

Parents' Weekend was more than just your usual family affair. The weekend began the afternoon of Friday, October 21, and the feeling of excitement was tangible as students met their families in Underwood during Registration. Parents from all over the world came to visit their children and the school to attend their children's classes on Saturday morning. There were also numerous workshops held for parents: panels on adjusting and getting used to the workload for parents of Juniors and College Counseling workshops for those of uppers and seniors. As always, Friday and Saturday night gave way to four incredible Grasshopper Night performances. Starring student acts in theatre, dance, and music, the pure talent of the student-directed show was reflected on the awestruck faces of the dazzled audience members. A music festival of sorts continued on Sunday as the Jazz Band played in Commons, while the Chapel held several concerts featuring the Academy's Chorus, Cantata, Orchestra and Fidelity Society. Not only did families get the opportunity to spend time together during Parents' Weekend, but parents and students alike got to enjoy a weekend of entertainment and relaxation halfway through the stressful fall term.

true exeter fashion

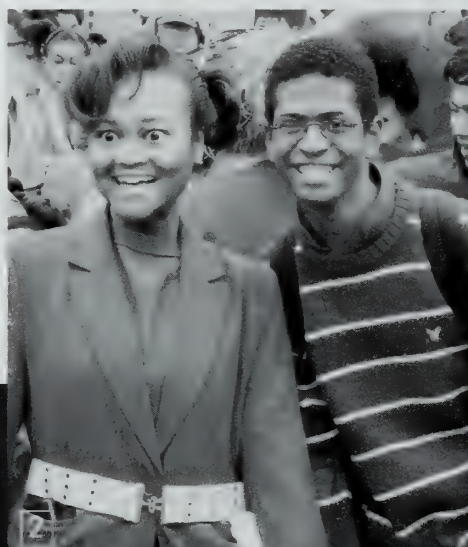

On one day, and one day only, during the year does the entire Phillips Academy student body collectively deck itself out in its least favorite color. For a magical Thursday during fall term, our beloved academy was suddenly filled with would-be geeks and nerds from Exeter. Calculators bulged from every pocket and hung from belts and key chains, while thick, black-rimmed glasses, high-riding pants, and tucked in red shirts, sweaters, and pant-legs seemed to be the dominant fashion. Various kinds of Exeter Varsity Math apparel, including jackets, sweaters, and t-shirts, and signs that proclaimed Exie love for their favorite subject

(and sport) were spotted all across campus. Andover students gathered together during conference in front of Sam Phil to celebrate the raw fashion sense of their Exeter counterparts, and everyone definitely had a fun time. Pete Kalmakis '06 all-plaid outfit and oil-slicked hair turned him into a model Exie, and Matt Kahn '06, with his Technicolor clown wig and suspenders, carried no less than twenty objects on him all day, including a large pink pony/llama hybrid.

prepare to dominate

Shortly after dinner on a special Friday afternoon, students dressed in all sorts of blue clothing converged from all places in the gym. By the brightly lighted basketball court, Blue Key Heads directed everyone to the bleachers, divided by grade. Deafening shouts filled the air as Seniors, Upers, Lowers, and even Juniors tried to outcheer each other. With the theme of "Welcome to the Jungle," Blue Key Heads threaded the entire Pep Rally with a skit featuring two warring tribes in the jungle, with Blue Key Heads and Gunga heading on a mission to capture the Exeter mascot. In between scenes, the various fall sports teams performed their skits – quite a few teams stuck to traditional routines, such as girls' soccer's dance routine and boys' water polo's speedo adventures, while others tried out new ideas. The most notable new creation was the football team's feature of the Burger King in a miraculous interception. After much screaming, hollering, and cell-phone waving in the dark during the final video, fans left the gym with hoarse voices, but full of spirit and ready to dominate Exeter.

"What do we eat? What do we eat? RED MEAT RED MEAT!" This particular Andover/Exeter cheer summed up all that was the magnificent bonanza that was Andover/Exeter 2005. Well over a dozen buses carried the vast majority of students up north into the desolate country (also known as Exeter, NH). Not only were students decked out in blue and white apparel, accessories, and body paint, but faculty and alumni young and old showed up sporting their varsity jackets and Andover baseball caps. The support that the Big Blue gave to its teams was unbelievable - from the early boys' soccer match to the final legendary football game, Andover supporters clearly outnumbered the Exies by scores and scores and completely drowned out the stadiums and fields with chants of "LET'S GO BIG BLUE!" Girl's volleyball was intense, until the last set when the undefeated girls wreaked havoc on their opponents in a rout, keeping Exeter to less than 10 points. Though the soccer and field hockey teams were narrowly defeated by Exeter, they fought hard and well and were rewarded by the outstanding spirit of their peers. Finally, the football game rewarded what we had been excitedly awaiting all term as the Andover offense bore down all day with breathtaking touchdowns while the stellar defense kept Exeter at 0 points until near the end of the game. As the clock ticked down to the landslide Andover victory of 24-8, the entire stadium unloaded onto the field in a haze of blue glory, marking the end of a spectacular experience for all.

In the words of Relient K, "The Sadie Hawkins Dance; in my khaki pants; the girls ask the guys; it's always a surprise." Here at Andover, the Sadie Hawkins Dance is the first semi-formal of the year. In true Sadie Hawkins tradition, the girls ask the guys, so for many ended and Saturday night approached, students, decked out in their finest, were greeted at the doors of Lower Right in Commons by the glowing Christmas lights and sounds of, among other artists, the Black Eyed Peas. During the dance the highlight for most was the coldest escape

The Winter Carnival is great for tubing, dancing, and procrastinating studying for the SATs. Back at Amesbury this year after last year's relocation, students braved the cold and raced down the slippery slopes, solo or in groups. Riding on the lift to the top of the slides, occasional snowball fights erupted. To escape the cold, and refuel before returning to the slopes, students could grab burgers (generously cooked by the PSPA) outside the lodge, then head on inside to warm up to the hip-hop beats on the dance floor. True to Andover form, a dance-off ensued towards the end of the night but was settled to the satisfaction of many when members of the Boys' Hockey team took off their shirts. All in all, it was a great night full of snow, hot coco, and crazy dancing.

Every Andover student has a different life story. Whether he or she is a Thai scholar attending PA just for Senior year or a day student from Methuen, each student brings a different life perspective to the campus atmosphere. This diversity makes for an enriching community because we have the opportunity to learn about the world through the eyes of our friends and classmates. Yet for the nine months that we are thrown together at Andover, our differences, while still celebrated, diminish. We become a single entity, collectively referred to as the 2005-2006 Phillips Academy student body. We join together on the same campus to share the same traditions, suffer through the same academic challenges, and distract ourselves in the same ways from the laundry list of things to do. We all spend some time hanging out in the dorms, and while we bring a wide range of fashion styles to the campus, there are identifiable trends that can be seen around school. For the one, two, three, or even four years of high school that we choose to spend at Andover, these are the daily events that we experience, right here right now.

tra·di·tion
n. a time-honored practice or set of such practices.

While Andover is known for its extremely rigorous and sometimes stressful academic curriculum, it is also famous for some of its deeply rooted and time-tested traditions. From new traditions like watching the OC every week to old ones such as attending Andover/Exeter contests, students are constantly following in the footsteps of those before them. Sometimes it is the little traditions that spring up from time to time that make a PA student's life that much easier. "Every morning my friends and I meet in front of Double Brick to go to breakfast, and on Sundays we always go to Starbucks to talk about everything that happened over the weekend," says Lily Wilkinson '09. These traditions keep us motivated and give us something to look forward to throughout the week; they bring people together and build relationships in a dorm, on a sports team, or simply within a group of friends. Although we all get excited for participating in monumental traditions such as attending Senior Tea and listening to the bagpipes of Matriculation and Graduation, we should not forget that perhaps some of the best traditions are the ones we create ourselves.

Perhaps the biggest difference between most schools and Andover is the campus. Most schools are not located on acre upon acre of grassy lawn and shaded pathways. Nor do most schools offer a massive bird sanctuary or include a pond on campus grounds.

We spend our days immersed in our campus: walking across Flagstaff to Commons for breakfast, having class outside behind Bulfinch, running in the Cage, frolicking on the Great Lawn, rocking out in Graves, and studying in the Garver Room or the PACC. Every person has his or her own favorite hangout, be it the fitness center, the second floor of the library, the day

showing off our style

Be it walking down the catwalk at the annual Andover Fashion show or just cruising down the path everyday, fashion at Andover is a central part of life on Academy hill. Everyone has his or her own personal style but there are certain identifiable looks that are popular this year. In Mrs. Chase's opening remarks, she dubbed the Class of 2006 the "class with class", and this has proven true in the fashion sense as well. The traditional PA gear is always in style and this year the Andover winter hat has become a favorite. Because Andover is a prep school, there are definitely the very preppy dressers who wear multiple polos at a time and never forget to pop their collars. There are also those who sport oversized sweatshirts, baggy jeans, and puffy flight jackets. Varsity athletes can be spotted in their varsity jackets and everyone in theatre troupes and a capella groups can be identified by their group apparel. And of course, there are always those who claim not to care how they dress. But while many styles do exist at PA, students like to be original and add their own flair to every style.

housing our memories

Johnson Hall: Stephanie Marton '07, Anna Klen '07, Jessica Waller '07

One of the most exciting parts about attending boarding school is living in a dorm. At first, it is intimidating, but the dorm soon becomes a boarder's home away from home. Sleeping, working, procrastinating, and hanging out with our best friends are some of the more popular activities in a dorm. Each dorm also has its own little quirks: Stimson girls are proud of their "Stimson Wall," Bishop boys congregate regularly in Mr. Zaeder's kitchen and battle each other for his infamous grilled cheeses, while Stowe House is notorious for instigating dance-offs in Ryley. In some way, dorm life is the most important part of a student's social life at PA - some of the best friendships are started in the halls of Rockwell and Nathan Hale. Dorms are where we let loose, relax, and really start to be ourselves, away from the prying eyes of teachers, librarians, and members of the opposite sex.

The start of the school year brings about a huge adjustment for each of the classes. Lower get used to the life of leisure as they blast their music collections in the dorms, competing with one another in who can sing/scream the loudest and disturb the Seniors competitions, while the Class of 2006 copes, slightly overwhelmed, with tough electives and the frustration of the college application process.

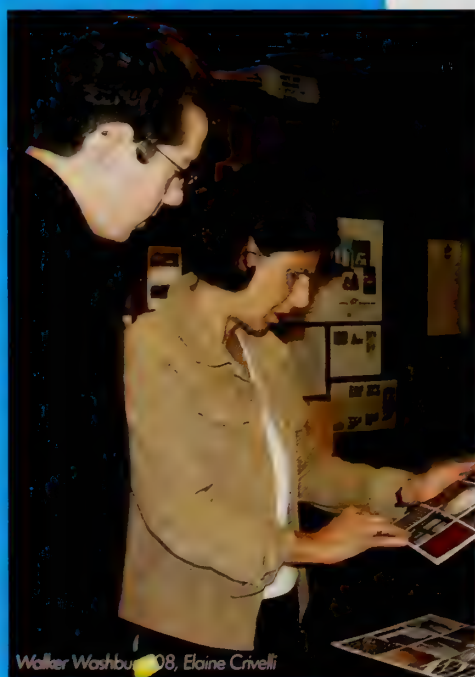

As Juniors complain about having to finish their homework by lights out, Uppers chide on them as they struggle to finish their homework by sunrise. The prospect of spring term also envelops different meanings for the classes: Uppers dread researching the History 310 paper in the library while Seniors dream constantly of living it up on the Great Lawn under the magnificently shining sun. Is it worth all the trouble of four academically strenuous years at PA to feel the satisfaction of getting out of the library and into college and the sunshine? Senior spring will tell.

The essence of Andover's football games can be described with three things: Blue Sharks, a Big Blue Crowd, and the all-mighty Gunga. To foreign eyes and ears, the noise, excitement and blueness of the occasion might be rather shocking. "Big Blue? But 'Blue' isn't a mascot. Don't they have an animal, like a normal school? And what is that giant hairy ape doing charging about and grunting like mad?" If they were to ask a student in the crowd, decked out in blue beads, blue face paint and blue spandex, they would get a straight answer. Andover doesn't have an official mascot because Andover doesn't need one! We've got the Big Blue Spirit in our veins. If we tried to label ourselves with say, a Boar, a Bumblebee or a Bear, we would be generalizing a community far too diverse for one animal. That is why we are represented by such a magnificent color: although each class and group has its own distinct identity, together we combine a thousand different shades of blue. From Juniors to Seniors, Andover students are a diverse and crazy bunch of people.

For '09: I spent quality time with a few freshmen this year and they all were appropriately reverential of my omnipotent senior status. But they also demonstrated something more: they possessed maturity unmatched by previous Junior classes. Though small in stature, '09 will soon learn how to rule the school, no doubt. As for '08: enthusiastic and ready to go, the Loweres have shaped up quite nicely, I must say. They are a hilarious bunch. They made the transition from Juniors to Loweres quite gracefully, involving themselves in an astounding array of activities. The potential of '08 is busting at the seams. To '07: Uppers usually have a tendency to become recluse and start biting their nails obsessively as they sit for hours in front of their computers. But not '07! Every time I walked into the library an Upper was sitting around with his or her friends, chatting away. Yet somehow, they still managed to get their work done. As a class, they have uncovered Andover's secret to success.

And finally, OH SIX!!! SENIORS, what, what!!! The Senior class is truly amazing. Not only do we rule the school, but we rule it with cool, classy style. With an extra hour of freedom on Friday nights, ten o'clock sign in on weeknights, and our emphatically blazing Senior shirts, we have established an irreplaceable sense of class unity and pride. The Class of 2006 will be remembered as being athletic, artistic, and chock full of leaders. I have no doubt that in ten years we will be ruling the world.

The students here at Andover make this place distinctive, for each of us here is wildly unique, and we as a whole have come from a vast array of backgrounds. Hurray for Andover and GO BIG BLUE!!!

For one, two, even three years, the Class of 2006 stood at All School Meeting, clapping endlessly for others, and waiting patiently for our moment to be lauded. Anxious, we worried the moment would never take place, that our first All-School Meeting as seniors would never come to pass. But suddenly burst in the 6'7 frame of Karl Hirt '06 through those leaden chapel doors, proudly bearing the American flag. Hundreds of students and faculty members stood clapping. Screams filled the chapel to an almost unbearable level. The silhouettes of "6"s floated in mid air, one after another. It was in this all school meeting, in this single unforgettable moment, that we became known as the "class with class."

We are truly a unique class. We have been known by many as "the athletic class" since freshman year because of our formidable numbers in the ranks of varsity sports. Through the years, however, we have proved to excel in all arenas; academic, athletic and artistic. As a class, we have grown together as we have gone through numerous changes. We'll be the first class to graduate without seeing "the burning of the A", but the first class to graduate under the all new state-of-the-art bell tower. We're the first class to take the new 2400 point SAT, and the last class to experience the old block schedule. We've witnessed the demolition of Evans, the move into Gelb, and the attempted creation of a legitimate "silent-study" Garver Room.

After our four indelible years at this distinguished academy, we are finally at the top. We've realized that as much as we loved signing out to the library at 8 every weeknight, being free to go wherever we want during study hours is much more liberating. We've realized that while weekend nights in Ryley the past three years were more enjoyable than we gave them credit, 10:00 on Friday nights is where the real fun begins. As seniors, we've realized it is okay to sit alone in Commons, to really love Ryley dances, to be-friend librarians, and to actually enjoy your classes.

Finally the super soakers, lawn chairs, aviators, and obsessive amounts of sun tanning aren't just a dream. That's right, senior spring, the term where your tan is more important than your next Economics class, is right around the corner.

And so for all that we've been through, applaud us: the seniors, the Invincible, the Class of 2006.

"Spring term, I took French 400, which went to Lawrence to work with local Haitians. One day, my friend and I were teaching this eight-year-old boy how to speak English. We were covering verbs and I was explaining how "aimer" was the verb "to like." The boy pointed across the room to a rather cute girl in my class and yelled out "[My friend's name] aime [girls' name]!" Needless to say the entire class, including the teacher and the girl, turned around to look at us. My friend turned beet red. The worst part, however, was that the teacher announced my friend's crush to the entire bus and continued to bring it up in class "

I looked at the clock, and it was 10:28. Freaking out, I grabbed my sneakers and ran all the way to the gym, loudly running into the silent room and desperately asking where the people taking the Bio 540 exam were supposed to sit. One teacher looked at me strangely and told me I should go to Graham House because I looked lost, but another one explained to me that this was the physics final. It was so embarrassing because there were over 100 people who were taking their exams in the gym who saw the whole thing "

"The story of our freshman year, "The Headlock" as it was falsely named just days after it occurred, was truly just a little misunderstanding between two young lovebirds. Katie Faulkner '06 and I were basically "together" but not really - it was confusing and vague like most Junior relationships are. When it was time for us to part our respective ways to Rockwell and Nathan Hale, I did what any gentleman would do - give a little goodbye peck on the cheek. Katie apparently thought otherwise, because she grabbed my arm and twisted it around my back like a cop would do to a perpetrator, whispering "not now!" That's the real story; there was no headlock, for all you rumor-spread-ers out there.

"Every young girl grows up dreaming of her first kiss. Somewhere in my childhood fantasies a poster sale tent outside of Commons didn't really make the cut. So one day freshman year, I find myself standing in a freshmen posse trying to give the most awkward hug good-bye to Mr. Simon Keyes '06. And as his head turns to give what he claims would have been a "gentlemanly peck on the cheek," my childhood dreams flash before my eyes as I scream out "Not in front of a poster sale tent!" And somehow in the avoiding of the kiss, my arms were twisted under his and I did some sort of shoulder twist that earned me the title "husband beater." I tried to hide from embarrassment and asked if I hurt him. "

Dina Burkitbayeva is from Almaty, Kazakhstan. Growing up in Kazakhstan, she is a native speaker of both Kazakh and Russian. She first came to the U.S. when she was nine, and she decided to come to PA as a boarder for freshman year. It was hard for Dina when she first came to PA because of the language barrier and because she was not accustomed to being away from home, but her friends, dorm mates and teachers helped her adjust along the way.

Wednesday nights are Dina's favorite thing about Andover, "because of the ice cream, the sports games, and all the clubs to go to." Dina is a regular at Asian Society, sings as co-head of the female a capella group Azure, and enjoys going to the Pine Knoll cluster munches. As PKN cluster president, she loves getting to meet and know new people in PKN. Dina is also a fan of the Russian club: "It's fun, we eat Russian food, talk about Russia and how awesome it is, and watch Russian gangster movies." On weekends, as a big fan of Big Blue athletics Dina usually is there to support them at games. Sometimes she goes out on a Girls' Night with her friends - out to dinner usually at Yama or Thai Sweet Basil.

Dina has become much more social since her freshman year. Because of Andover's diversity, she has become a lot more interested in different traditions and cultures. For example, Dina tried hip-hop and it ended up being one of her favorite activities. In addition to hip-hop, she is also interested in modern dance and jazz dance. As for academics, Dina became interested in architecture since she came to Andover and she plans to continue with an architecture-related major in college. "Perhaps civil engineering, or civil and regional planning," she says.

" There I was. The spotlight had come on. Katherine Adams had finished the last chorus and was rocking out on rhythm guitar. Ben Lasman was walloping away on the drums as he too ended the chorus with a fill. I stepped out – not because I was symbolically taking the challenge, but rather, because I need to step on the envelope filter pedal that lay three feet before me.

And suddenly, as my foot made contact with the footswitch, I felt as though I had lost all my nervousness. My fingers seemed to hammer on and off the fretboard effortlessly, and all I could hear was the smooth, overdriven notes wailing from Lasman's Marshall. I closed my eyes, basking in pride and exhilaration, thoroughly enjoying my solo.

That provided to be a dramatic misjudgment, for the next thing I knew, martial arts extraordinaire Jae Han was barreling into me in a flying-slash-turning kick as I narrowly dodged his foot, only to feel him smash into and bounce off the surface of my guitar. Despite having suffered broken strings and darted flying karate-chopped wood planks during rehearsals, as I struggled to continue the solo, I knew right then that I would forever remember this as my best (and worse) moment in Grasshopper II Night 2005.

PAPS has been scurrying around trying not to let them escape, but it's hard to contain fire. No student wonders or cares where the leaves eventually go. But this year is different. Just today there's a huge pile of fallen leaves on the Vista. Bigger than anything I could have imagined as a child. masonfried

As a four-year senior and faculty child, Mason Fried, has a lot of Andover pride. Of his family, he says, "I have a mother named Jane and a father named Steve. I also have a sister named Hope. I have two dogs, the younger smaller pup named Lou and the older wiser sage named Clark. That's right...Lewis and Clark, I guess they were explorers or something." After being born in Framingham, he moved to Andover. While many students find their transition to Andover difficult, Mason found it easy. "Well I walked down the street to my middle school up until 8th grade. Then the next year I woke up and instead of walking down, I just walked up the street to PA."

Mason began his athletic career at Andover by playing soccer, but after his lower year, Coach Mo recruited him to play football. Mason is also a three-year varsity lacrosse player. He says, "I started playing lax in like 6th grade or something, but I sucked. I got competent with the sport in 8th grade. I was always on sick teams back in the day. I played with this kid named Trey back in 8th grade and he was just this real big kid. He was slow and real flat footed and he would just kind of muscle his way through the line...so I started calling him the gazelle. Still do."

Mason participates in ARC. Mason says of his buddy, "Jimmy is the man, he throws a football better than any of the quarterbacks on our team." Mason is also a musician of sorts, playing the tandem keyboard as part of the "Lobby Act" at Grasshopper Night 2005.

Mason loved Mr. Thorn's English 300 class. He feels quite differently about Latin: "I am a terrible Latin student but I did come in 3rd in the Latin declamation contest, that is, 3rd out of 3." As you can see, Mason has a good sense of humor and is known throughout the school as a "hilarious" kid. As for the fact that it is his Senior year at PA, he says: "I'll miss the kids. I'll miss all the great times I've had with my friends. I'll miss the teams I've played on. I'm writing this in December '05, but I'm willing to bet that I will miss Senior Spring. I have had a good run, I guess."

" It was the Andover/Exeter wrestling meet of my Upper year. Exeter had beaten us handily the past two years and with only three matches left in the meet and down by a good amount, nobody thought the trend was going to change. We were down by seventeen points. Your team receives six points if you pin your opponent. Quick math 100 will reveal that we needed to pin and win every match left.

The first match was Akshay Paintal '07, our 103 pounder. He pinned his opponent, as expected. Kassie Archambault '06, Andover's only girl to ever place at our league tournament, then wrestled one of her better matches and pinned her opponent in a very exciting match. Suddenly, there was an intense excitement in the room. Alex Green '07, who had been out almost all season and was wrestling his first match of the year, was our only hope. He pinned a valiant foe and we beat Exeter 35-34 in one of the greatest comebacks in Andover wrestling history.

That was one of the most exciting moments anyone on that team had ever witnessed. It was straight out of a Dis-ney Movie. It was unreal.

Four Year Senior

- Techmasters' President

Parag Khandelwal is originally from Medina, Ohio: a place he calls "the home to farmland, cows, and me." He decided to apply to PA to "get out of Ohio and have a once-in-a-lifetime experience." When he was applying, however, "my sisters didn't want me to apply and a few times they hid my applications. As a result, I couldn't visit before I applied and the only ideas I had about Phillips came straight from their brochures and photos online. I imagined an academy with a picturesque campus with stunning academics."

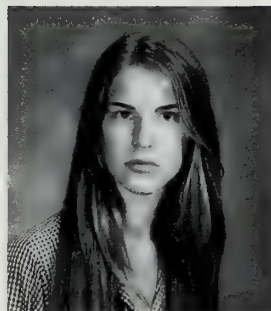

At PA, Parag is involved in what he likes to call "drastically different clubs that allowed me to meet almost every type of person at this school," and he believes these are what make him unique. He is on the executive committee of Model UN, the board of The Phillipian, the pole vault team on Varsity Track, and is the President of Techmasters. "Let's be honest, Techmasters, Track, and Model UN don't exactly attract the same type of kids," he says. Parag has lived in Draper Cottage and Stearns, and he fondly recalls memories of "Marty threatening to throw dirty diapers onto our beds if we left our shoes out in the hall or Seniors throwing a dance party in an unsuspecting student's room." As for academics, Parag says he enjoys Japanese and Economics. When asked what he would miss most about Andover after graduating, he says that he will miss the Andover bubble and the people here most.

"It's kind of a paradox - when inside, kids endeavor to get out and complain how annoying it is to be within this secluded environment," he says of the Andover bubble. Though others may complain, Parag realizes he's going to miss the comfort of a tight-knit campus atmosphere.

To sum up his experience at PA, he says this: "PA has gone above and beyond. It has provided me with everything I have wanted in a boarding school far away from home - unique kids, hard classes, and an inspiring environment that has pushed me beyond my known limits."

" There were many dynamics that made the 2005 volleyball season especially memorable for me. From the beginning, it felt great to be a returning student (I was a new Upper) and a Senior. As a team, we knew we could be strong, but we surprised ourselves with our own ability and determination to win. Though we ended up finishing in second place, I felt that our team became much closer than I ever could have hoped; each person's role, their personality quirks, and their respect for other players and our coaches made this past fall one of the most memorable times of my " high school career.

Naturally, we decided to encase Gabe Worgaftik '06 in it, including a nice bubble wrap helmet, and watched him as he attempted to go down stairs (without hands mind you) and even meet Senior Paul Englehardt's parents. He fell down a lot and needed five people to spot him as he took to the stairs, and in the end, he almost suffocated on the many layers of plastic that were wrapped around him. But hey, it was fun. "

" One of the beautiful things about living in a stack is how close you become with your house counselor. Once, Mr. Stableford, our house counselor, was in my room when he heard music blasting from [Senior] Khaki Burke's room across the hall. "Stabes" (as we call him) is constantly friendly, so he went over to Khaki's room to see what was going on. He opened the door to see Khaki dancing, by himself, to Rick Astley's "Never gonna give you up, never gonna let you down..." Khaki kept going, facing his computer, for about thirty seconds before he turned around in the course of his dance. Khaki froze; Mr. Stableford said "Hi" and walked down the stairs. They haven't looked at each other with a straight face since then. "

" A particularly momentous memory I have at Phillips involves Rabbit Pond, Andres Bobadilla, Owen Remeika, and a cold Saturday night during senior year. At about 11:00 I was walking down the Ryley Room steps with Andres when Remeika was walking up towards us. When Remeika asked what we were doing, I, being the fool that I am, responded, "getting ready to swim in Rabbit Pond."

At about 11:15 I found myself at the edge of Rabbit Pond next to Remeika and Andres crying and telling them we were going to die. I was worried Andres would be pulled under by a snapping turtle, never to be seen again, or that we would grow eight heads after touching the filthy Fuess run-off water.

Anyway, we went for a dip that night, and as I ran back to my dorm holding my clothes and smelling of fish, I noticed a gash in my side. A tetanus shot and lots of questioning later, the wound finally healed. "

[Matriculation: 9/09/02]

It's been quite the four years, but we just can't seem to comprehend it; where has the time gone? The first day of our freshmen orientation feels like just yesterday, yet in reality, we are about to enter into Senior Spring. Looking back on the past three years we remember long days of work, sleepless nights, friend drama, teacher drama, highs, lows, and all the in between. But as we reflect on all the time we spent together, we know in our hearts that it was all worth it. We have made the best of friends and we have had the best of times. Here's to our last term '06 - let's make it unforgettable.

This year many of us struggled to get honors grades, make the varsity team, and become the president of some board ...or the school. However, in the midst of all the work, we still found time for ourselves. Our class to me is about more than sports or grades. It is about the little things we do that kept us going during this demanding year. Whether it was walking down to Starbucks and indulging in a caramel frappachino, relaxing watching a movie in your dorm room with your closest friends, or joining a pick up soccer game on the great lawn, we made it through.

We now have 3 years of high school experience and have figured out by now what makes us happy on those dreary and tiresome winter days and who makes those bad grades and homesick moments disappear.

We will always remember the momentous events of our years together, the red sox winning the World Series, the blizzard of '05, the war in Iraq, hurricane Katrina, as well as some sentimental memories, those first days together as freshmen, the all-nighters, the all school meetings, the SAT's...hopefully not. The unity we posses, however, can only get stronger as we room, eat, dance, cuddle, play sports and experience new things together. We are the next world leaders, politicians, Nobel Prize winners, environmentalists, musicians, athletes, inventors, and conscientious citizens.

On the surface, an Andover upper is like any other high school student; we were busy worrying about the next episode of The OC, our date for the dance, our plans for the weekend, the amount of pimples invading our face, and weather or not each photo on face-book was flattering enough to keep it's tag. We were also, however, creating community service programs, practicing the cello, and leading our sport teams to victory.

For many of us, the light at the end of the tunnel is senior year. As we sat through our history 300 classes, AP science courses, advanced languages, and Shakespeare, weather we admitted it or not at the time, it is all worth something in the end, and our now not so foreign college counselors have tried to remind us of that. We have much to look forward to as the year 2007 approaches. The prospects of senior year are thrilling: leading orientation, walking into the chapel for the first all school meeting yelling "07!," later sign in on Fridays, senior tea, prom, and lastly graduation. I am positive that 2007 will bring even better memories as we continue in this great institution we call Andover.

Born in London, AJ Charles moved across the Atlantic to Baltimore in 6th grade with his mother and father, Paulette and Kevin Moore. At home "I relax, wooing the ladies with candlelit dinners as I refine my culinary skills, watching Oprah and Desperate Housewives, playing checkers with myself, wooing the ladies (meant to add emphasis), dance to the electric slide in front of the mirror, and hitting up a little croquet while watching the sun set."

AJ was one of the many student who applied to both Andover and Exeter and decided to come to Andover. Identifying himself primarily as a soccer player, AJ felt that the admissions office made much more of an effort when he came back to campus because they set him up with Mike Spiak '06 and he met both the Andover coaches and players. He says, "I started playing when I was like 5 because it was the most popular sport in England where I had lived and all my friends played it. We would go to watch professional club matches so that also made it interesting. I had also attended a boarding school when I lived in England so we played soccer, rugby, and cricket. Since I was not big enough for rugby, and cricket was boring, I decided to pick up soccer." Now, as an Upper, AJ has been on the boys' varsity soccer team for all three years and also participates on the wrestling team.

Of his transition to Andover (after making the smart decision to come) he says, "I cried myself to sleep when I felt all alone each night, but then I began wooing the ladies and realized PA was as cool as the other side of the pillow."

AJ has enjoyed many classes here at Andover, but he especially liked Art 250 with Mr. Wicks. His favorite memory of Andover this year was, "Having a dorm meeting with everyone ONLY wearing boxers and boots, and then everyone running from there to do our recycling at the Andover Inn."

Rebecca Yankes, or "Q" as she likes to call herself, hails from the town of Nashua, NH. After being home-schooled her whole life, she decided to apply to Andover because her mother worked here; she describes the difference between the two as "crazy," but "really cool" because of PA's diversity. Q has always been a circus arts extraordinaire, and although she still performs in the summer, at PA, she finds S&R to be her new love. She also finds herself participating in music and theater, as she has been in several productions including The Nutcracker 2004, and she is also in the community service project Theater Troupe.

Living in the dorms has been a fun experience for Q. She likes "staying up late and finding someone who wants to procrastinate as badly as [as I do.]" She credits her house counselor and Japanese teacher Ms. Shimazu: "she's always been a big help to me... she's always there" However, she is definitely aware of the "Andover bubble:" "I'll go home and I'll have no idea what's going on... with the workload here, we're too busy trying to keep our grades up to really get into anything else going on outside of PA." The thing PA has done for her most is teach her "the ability to study for a long time," she says.

As a new Lower, Q thought "the hardest part was that all the people in my grade were already friends... at the same time, it was comforting because everybody already knew what they were doing." As an Upper this year, she complains of the workload and lack of sleep, but also says she relaxes in GW on weekdays, and goes downtown to Starbucks with friends on the weekend to blow off some steam. Towards the future, contrary to popular belief, she actually looks forward to the college application process, because "I know it's going to be a lot of work, but it also looks like a lot of fun." Q also looks forward to taking some of the more exotic courses Andover offers come Senior year. One final fact about Q: if you are to open her closet, you would find "food, lots of food."

Forget the rumors you've heard about Lower year that it's not all that it's said to be. We would not define Lower year as the "forgotten year," as many people refer to it. It's the year we are no longer the youngest, when we get to meet the "newbies" (both the new Juniors and new Lowers), when we know what we really have to and don't have to attend (certain Ryley dances), and for all boarders, no more lights out. Most importantly, Lower year is about having a good time. With only five classes – one less than Junior year – we are given more time to try new things. "Lower year is like jello: not too hard, and tons of fun," says Jimmy Spang '08. Like jello we have and will continue to stick together and maintain our flexibility throughout the next two years here. As we dread the workload of Upper year, we'll work together and pull through in order to enjoy the seniority of our Senior and final year here.

In general, this year's Lower class, the Class of '08, has a lot of school and class spirit, intelligence, liveliness and athleticism. As a class we came up with not one, not two, but three hand symbols to represent ourselves. The first is an awkward squat with your hands above your head; it looks like an eight from a distance but will be difficult to perform during ASM come Senior year. The second is an uncomfortable eight made with one hand, which is bound to give us all carpal tunnel syndrome some day. The last and most common symbol requires both hands is also referred to as the "dipset" icon.

We're the class that makes claims to the famous Kit Halvorson '08, who at 15 has already made a name for himself in the fashion industry; Dan Silva '08 who last year was the only freshman accepted into Fidelio; and Simone Salvo '08, an accomplished photographer who spent the summer after freshman year in Taiwan with an internship and who has previously had exhibits in Boston. In addition, '08 had roughly 35 varsity athletes in the fall, 24 in the winter, and 20 in the spring. In the words of Tatum Collins, "I love '08 because we have a wide array of diverse talents and a wonderfully varied collage of backgrounds and abilities."

seyoko's facts

Hometown: Tokyo, Japan

Birthday: May 15, 1990

Dorm: Stimson

• Junior Varsity Volleyball

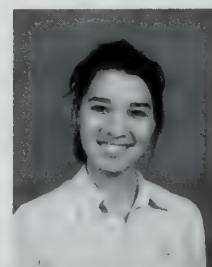

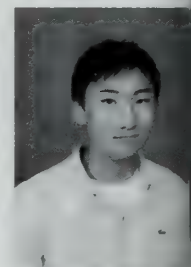

• Community Service Participant

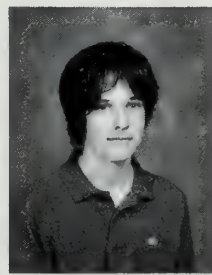

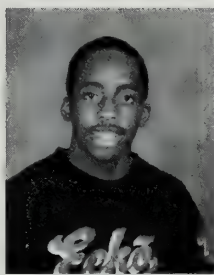

Sayoko was born and raised in Tokyo. Her old school was very small with only 23 kids in her grade; most of them had been in the same class since kindergarten, and she feels like it was "a big family." However, it didn't offer much selection in classes or sports. So after 9th grade, Sayoko decided to come to Andover because she wanted "more opportunities" and "a chance to meet more people." PA is a "challenging community" for her and she feels like she can push herself to work harder here. Coming to PA has been a "relatively easy" transition for her, she says, crediting the girls from JV volleyball for helping her feel more comfortable this far away from home.

At Andover, Sayoko plays volleyball and participates in community service. For the next two terms, she hopes to become more involved in community service, and she also wants to try out a new sport in the spring. Her favorite subject at PA is English, because she really likes the class discussions – something that her old school in Japan didn't offer. On weekends Sayoko goes to the dances and concerts with her friends in Stimson.

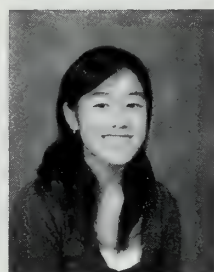

As for the future, Sayoko hasn't made definite plans yet. As she says, "I'm not exactly sure; that's kind of the reason why I'm at Andover. I wanted to try things and see what I'm interested in.

There are so many opportunities here and I feel like I could find things that I want to continue to do throughout college and the rest of my life." As for her favorite moment at PA so far, "I was really surprised during the week of Andover/Exeter! Everyone is so spirited! It has definitely been the craziest week so far!"

Mike Palmero of the class of '08 grew up right here in Andover. Phillips was the obvious choice when he finished middle school. When he was accepted, he was pleased to know that a couple of friends had gotten in too; it would make the first day of school just that much easier. In his time at Phillips, he integrated well, especially through classes and football. Academically, "it was a lot, I was ready for a challenge."

This year, he has returned for another year at Andover. Carefully balancing the challenging academics and his love of sports, Mike cedes the point that "academics are the most important." He works hard in his favorite class - Chinese - which he describes as "a challenge" and "totally different from anything else." He hopes that it will help him in his aspiration to be in international law or business.

But that's not really something that he thinks about every day. He prefers to live day to day, hanging out with friends and playing sports. His favorite activity - baseball - doesn't start until spring, but he is already anticipating the baseball season when he will go down to Florida for the Red Sox's pre-season. In the meantime, he spends an hour every Wednesday night on his WPAA radio show, "Shorts on Sports" with his friend and fellow baseball fan J.R. Santaniello '08. Covering "the world of professional sports as well as Phillips Academy varsity sports," they spice up their talk show frequently with guests. Mike hopes to join the boys' varsity baseball team in the spring and continue doing his talk show throughout the year.

Look on facebook.com and from the groups with '09 members, you can begin to get a sense of the cliques: Hale girls, those isolated in Abbot, and yes, the Rockwell guys. In some ways this cyberspace parallels our class in reality and developed simultaneously with our integration into what seemed at first an alien world.

Upon arrival at PA from all "quarters" of the world, it was easy to wonder about our class. We weren't sure what expectations we had for our fellow '09ers. Soon we recognized members of our class as the debaters who never stopped talking, math geniuses who never started talking, pianists, trumpeters, soccer players, and promising runners. Next we formed friendships and groups, some as constant as the Commons menu, others changing like many of our class syllabi. Those we knew from our dorms and sports teams became like family and shared in losses, biology tests gone wrong, mistakes on the field, victory against Exeter, and finally finishing homework on Thursday nights (or Friday mornings).

Not to get all anthropological, but our class differences and divisions unified us into one body - cell specialization right here for those of you who think you'll actually remember Bio 100 in 20 years. We are unified by our admiration for Iris's mad math skills, less than perfect attendance at orchestra, and craving for revenge after someone gets onto our Facebook account with less than moral intentions. No matter how different our goals and skill sets are, we all share more than we think.

In the first year at Phillips Academy, it has become apparent that our Class of 2009 has what it takes to achieve great things before graduation. Some of us have had hard times and have been down, but as a team, we have done our share to pick each other up. Looking out for one another and encouraging our fellow students, athletes, musicians, and artists, we can all continue to grow in our separate directions and together at the same time. Although we might not have the best hand signal or an overwhelmingly apparent identifying quality yet, we have as much, if not more potential than any other class ever to walk up the Great Lawn toward Sam Phil on that warm and sunny September evening of matriculation. As we move into Lower, Upper, and finally our Senior year, let's seize the opportunity to leave a mark - our mark on this campus and on the world with our Junior year as a firm foundation.

Kyle and Kevin Ofori are two brothers from Ohio. Andover was the only boarding school they applied to, and they both decided to come here. They say that the best part about freshman year is "not knowing about everything that's happening so we're always learning." Both Kyle and Kevin hang out with other 9th graders, and claim that "the ones who hang out with upperclassmen don't have many freshmen friends." As for their brand-new experience living in the dorms, they both claim to follow lights-out and finish their work by 11 PM. They both also admit to procrastinating: "people in my dorm will stay on the computer all day playing Starcraft and Grand Theft Auto" says Kevin, while Kyle says that "other people in the dorm have discovered a game called Bubble Trouble online." Sounds like freshmen boys.

Kevin is playing Squash as his fall sport while Kyle is doing Crew. Both sports are new to the twins, but they have enjoyed the new experiences. They also enjoy watching football on TV. Both twins are also in the Academy Band together. Kevin plays the alto sax and Kyle plays the clarinet. But hey, they are both woodwinds. Kyle claims to be busier than his brother: "I only have like 10 minutes to eat dinner between Crew and Band." Like most Andover students, they both feel overcommitted, but they make it a point to hang back and relax. Kevin enjoys going downtown on the weekends, while Kyle says he likes dances and playing DDR in Ryley Room.

When asked if the twins had any advice for their classmates, Kyle said, "Find a hand symbol fast - one that you can put up in the air, and pay attention to all the details on assignments." While Kevin said, "You don't want to go the whole year not knowing how everything goes. Be Social." Both Kevin and Kyle look forward to their future at Andover. The two plan on taking their Andover careers "one day at a time." To sum it up, Kyle and Kevin, though very unique, are a lot like every other freshman boy. When asked about the infamous bicentennial statue, Kyle said "I think it's very significant and the artist has a vivid imagination." And then to conclude the interview Kevin responded, "The one that looks like a guitar? I thought it was a guitar. I guess I haven't really looked at it."

Made famous as the most promising freshman runner on the cross country girls' team, Breezy Jordan '09 has enjoyed her first year here at Andover. Growing up in Plymouth, Massachusetts, Breezy lived with her parents, her little sister, and two cats. At a local private Catholic school ("the public schools were pretty bad," she notes) she excelled both academically and musically. That was also where she first learned to love running. "It was the end of seventh grade," she said, "we had to run the mile in track."

Many people have trouble adjusting when they first come to Andover; but not Breezy. She just took it all in stride. "The hardest part was learning to manage my time. But I didn't really think that the transition was that bad."

Breezy aspires to be a research scientist, or maybe a doctor. But she didn't let this stop her from having fun. Representing Mexico in Model UN, she found the activity "kind of hard, but really fun." Branching out, she joined ARC and decided to tackle the notoriously difficult language of Chinese. She loves the classes, the teachers, and the people. She feels that "there's nobody here that doesn't care."

Cross country played a large role in Breezy's experience at Andover; it became a niche of sorts, a place for her to meet cool people and do something that she loved. This year she joined the girls' cross country team in their achievement of winning first place. A time of 20:24 earned her 14th place at Interschols and a part of the "All New England Cross Country Team."

"It was great to go to Interschols with the team, and it was amazing when we won. When we found out we won we all got in this little huddle and were all like 'WE BEAT EXETER!' It was so awesome to know that in [Captain] Katie Faulkner's 4th year on varsity we finally beat Exeter. I didn't have my best race because of shin splits, but it was amazing just to run for this team and be able to say that we won Interschols."

Being at a boarding school provides a unique environment where we constantly encounter faculty members outside of class – at night in our dorms, at our extracurricular meetings, in the fitness center, even on Saturday nights in the Ryley Room. I remember one horrible day during my freshmen year when I was too upset to attend my JV lacrosse practice. Later that night, I got a call from my coach Lisa Joel. I was expecting to be yelled at, but she was just calling to check up on me. The next day, I found a huge bag of candy in my mailbox with a small note from her. I realized at that moment what it meant to be a teacher at Andover: not only an authority figure, but also a caring friend and an adopted parent.

We may have naively come to Andover expecting to see our teachers simply in the context of the classroom, but sooner or later the student-faculty relationship becomes something more than that. We cultivate friendships with each other based on common interests and shared experiences. We elaborate on our bad days and share our frustrations, we sit in their living rooms and watch movies, we eat their homemade brownies and go out for sushi or Mexican food together – and every once in awhile we even snag a car ride downtown.

Throughout our time at Andover, our faculty members have given us tremendous gifts of empowerment. Their incredible achievements have inspired us to pursue our passions. They have invited us into their homes and into their lives. They have believed in us, even when we thought we were failures. They have helped us develop from insecure Juniors into confident Seniors, ready to move onto the next phase of our lives.

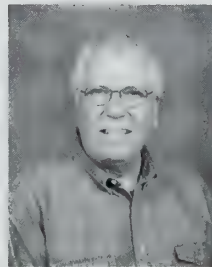

So here's to all of our teachers, house counselors, coaches, academic advisors, and college counselors who have helped us become the people we are: thank you. Thank you for those conference periods you spent drilling integrals and proper grammar into our heads, for putting your heart into the sports teams that you coached, for the creative dorm and advising munches you held when we desperately needed a break from Commons, for the lifelong advice that you gave us, and for inspiring us to go out into the world and do whatever we set our minds to. We are better people because of you.

At the beginning of his career, Henry Lynn Herbst taught French at Bowling Green State University and University of Pennsylvania. "It was an environment where there would be 38 students in a first-year French class and each student could only speak two sentences per period," he recalls. He decided to start teaching at PA in 1972 because he felt that "the secondary school level is where the future of foreign language is."

Since then, Mr. Herbst has been incredibly involved with French education, inside and outside of classes. He established an exchange program with the Ivory Coast, organized a teaching colloquium here on campus, and co-wrote three textbooks with Hale Sturges: Une Francophone. He was also selected by the White House to be a distinguished teacher under the first Bush administration. "French is not just the language of France. It is also the language of a variety of cultures, and I have felt the French department at PA should underscore the teaching of those cultures," he said.

A favorite memory of his, he recalls was "once on our anniversary, as we were coming back early from dinner at the Inn, we found John F. Kennedy Jr. in the kitchen baking us a cake for a surprise anniversary party students had planned! Turns out they had discovered a wedding picture we had with the date stamped on it."

Before she came to PA, Carole Braverman lived in California, writing plays and working in theater while raising a young son. In 1979, as she said, her life "turned on a dime." Responding to an ad in the paper, she traveled 3000 miles to her interview at Andover in the middle of a blizzard, where she was taken by the beauty of the place, and promptly hired on the spot.

Ms. Braverman feels that one of the many appealing aspects of Phillips Academy was that it provided "the opportunity for teachers to pursue professional growth." Another aspect of PA she speaks of lovingly is the talent of her students; she recalls meeting extraordinary writers in her classes who just "took my breath away," and watching an ordinary student "grow and flourish," rising to excellence.

After retiring, Ms. Braverman plans on relocating to Philadelphia, where she will spend time finishing a novel, writing a book on teaching playwriting at Andover, and becoming involved in political and civic life.

"It will be hard to leave this place," she says. "It is just so difficult to leave all the talented and curious students and faculty members that I have gotten to work with every day."

Paul Kalkstein graduated from Philadelphia Academy in 1961. After becoming a teaching fellow at Choate, he made the decision to return to Andover in 1970 because "it was simply a better school." At Andover, one of Mr. Kalkstein's favorite activities was coaching. He coached lacrosse and basketball for 40 years, and is quite the coaching legend: he has coached every level of basketball at PA, from the junior team to cluster teams to boys' and girls' varsity; he has the most wins as an Andover lacrosse coach at 162-89-1; he has coached undefeated teams and great players such as Bill Belichick '71 (who also played lacrosse). He was also a longtime advisor to both the Ham Radio club and WPAA. As for his teaching experience, he says, "I have taught all kinds - people who've ended up in jail, and people who've ended up as millionaires." He affectionately remembers a Lower from his English 200 class and basketball team who did a term paper on Bishop John Neumann and was thus inspired to become a priest (and eventually an officer in the Vatican). The entire basketball team went to his first mass.

Mr. Kalkstein will spend his retirement boating in the summer in Maine and managing his small web-design business. He is also the director of SummerNet, an online long-distance learning program; after he retires, he still plans on running the program for PA. During his sabbatical, he wrote a novel, Jump the Kennebec, and plans on finishing another novel based in 16th century France.

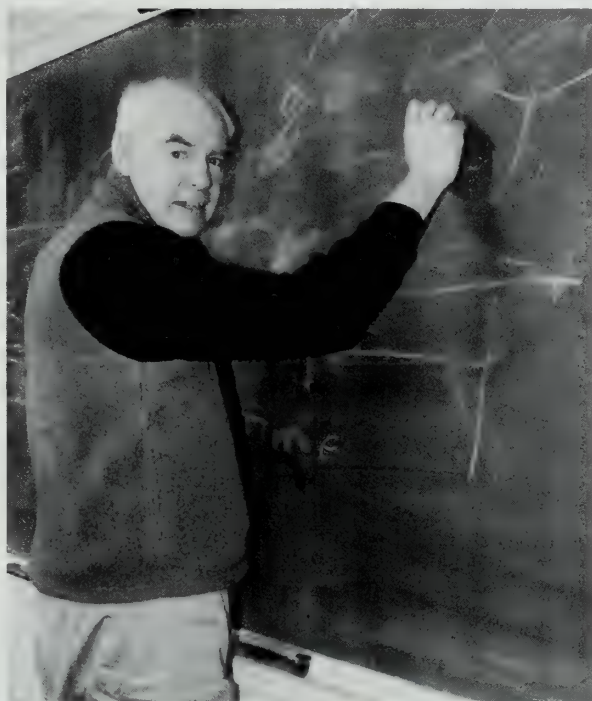

Looking back at over three decades of life at Andover, Mr. Kalkstein will remember PA for the "excellent opportunities for all faculty, interesting colleagues, and great variety in all aspects of life."

"It was a joint decision," Sally Herbst said about coming to Andover in 1972. "Mr. Herbst and I were newly married, and we wanted to move back East, from where both of us came."

Mrs. Herbst's favorite memories of her career at PA involve teaching. One of her favorite things about teaching was "when you're teaching a class and there's a student who hasn't quite comprehended the material yet, but then you see a light go off in her eyes, and there is a wonderful moment of clarity."

After retiring, Mrs. Herbst has planned a plethora of activities to pursue. An avid gardener, she has taken

In her spare time during the year, she is interested in looking into the process of cooking ("although I have not been particularly fond of cooking in the past... neither Mr. Herbst nor I could remember the last time I cooked," she says with a laugh), and going to markets and visiting places in general.

Having always been very involved in volunteer work, including English as a Second Language and programs for the learning disabled, Mrs. Herbst also will work with abused women on the Cape.

To sum up her experience at PA, she says this: "The best thing, and the thing that

Phillips Academy is necessarily and above all an academic institution, rich in history, imbued with current vitality and endowed with a talented and inspirational faculty. We come here from across the world to share in an unmatched educational experience, to learn in a community dedicated to the life of the mind, the enrichment of the inquisitive spirit, the expansion and unpacking of thought. Needless to say, we must sometimes step out of the classroom to fully appreciate our environment. Sometimes, in fact, we must take a break altogether. And yet, what, at Phillips Academy, counts as a break?

Let me relate a story that was told to me several years ago by a friend, now a PA graduate. The tale pertained to a certain underclassman in a large boys' dorm. This child, in the several weeks since matriculating, had been under close surveillance by his house counselors. The student's offense: abnormal behavior. Typically, when thinking of abnormal behavior, one imagines Australian naturalists wrestling alligators, individuals who compulsively wear latex gloves, and certain members of the Phillips Academy mathematics department. What, I wondered at the time, could this freshman have done to inspire such concern amongst his advisors? Further observation revealed that the student watched television in the common room, studied from time to time and achieved respectable grades. He made friends in the dorm and avoided inspiring any serious animosity amongst his peers.

And that, it seemed, was all. Several months after arriving at PA, the student left and continued his education at a public high school.

So what are we to deduce from this strange case? We readily assume that those who leave the academy are overwhelmed by the workload, weighed down by the restrictions of the administration, sick of the competition inherent to so relentless a schedule. Still rarely, if ever, is this truly the case. The student of the story's only abnormality was his continued tendency to lead what for many teenagers would be considered a normal life. What makes PA students unique is neither their intellectual capacity nor their ability to withstand pressure. It is their ability to measure time differently, to relentlessly pursue goals, vie for positions, make the most of any given allotment of time. We cram our weeks with activities, academic and otherwise. We sing in choirs, play sports, rehearse in plays, and go abroad in search of new frontiers. This verve does not make us nobler than the aforementioned freshman. Rather it attests to our own abnormality. Never content with whom we are, we strive constantly to expand our experience instead of simply resting in its current state. And rather than being chastised for pursuing the unseen, the unknown and the unknowable, we are instead questioned for doing the opposite. Let us be grateful, then, for this leeway to limn along a path of our own choosing. Let us rejoice in the strangeness of our days.

Community Service is the most popular non-required extra-curricular activity at Andover. Over half of the students at PA participate in some form of Community Service during any given year in over two dozen different projects ranging from Science Club for Girls to ARC to Academy Manor Nursing Home, under the guidance of the Community Service office, led by Chad Green, and the Community Service Board, made up of a dedicated group of seniors and uppers. This year marked several changes in the program as the student board was restructured and the program list reorganized. In addition to organizing traditional events such as the Bread and Roses Picnic and sponsoring speakers, the board was also the first to do a group service project in lieu of just meeting on Sundays. From both coordinators and volunteers, non sibi flourished in 2005-2006.

For some students in the Class of 2006, the Phillips Academy experience stretched far beyond Andover, Massachusetts. For them, one of their four years of high school was spent in another country. They left the Andover bubble in hot pursuit of a change of pace, and that is exactly what they got. Being thrown into a whole new culture changed the outlook of these students in ways that cannot be taught in a classroom. For a whole year, they not only spoke a different language; they lived a different lifestyle. They left a piece of themselves in Spain, Italy, China or France, and with it, a piece of Andover. Hopefully those living abroad in the Class of 2007 will bring back those same memories and experiences for all of us to enjoy.

The Council

After the speeches were given and the votes counted, the 2005-2006 Student Council was formed by representatives from every grade and every cluster. The group began the year with ambition and excitement. Their main goals included a one card system allowing students to keep money in an account and use a card at Ryley and other campus locations, and also an online sign-in system so that students could sign-in to their dorms from anywhere on campus. Smaller groups within the council also worked on projects. For example, the Upper representatives organized an exclusive Uppers-only prom also known as MORP. The council made their demands known to faculty members through their advisor and also through presentations at faculty meetings, watching proudly as they set the wheels in motion to get things done.

"We really worked as a team and there was a lot of laughter in the meetings. We worked hard and we definitely got a lot done, but we had a great time together. It's been fun and productive."

The Phillipian, the Pot Pourri, and WPAA. As most see it, they are three worlds full of constant stress and ever-daunting deadlines, on top of the pressure and deadlines that are already strenuously imposed on most of us by our workloads. However, the power to create makes it all worth it. In the end, whether it may be every Friday in the mailroom, once a week in the WPAA studio, or once at the end of the year, the frantic Phillipian writer, the harried

WPAA DJ, and the frazzled Pot Pourri photographer gets to see his or her efforts culminate into something extraordinary. In these clubs, new friends are made, boundaries are broken, and new intellectual heights are reached. Not only are current students updated, but alumnae far and near are as well. Serving multiple purposes, these media giants branch out to almost everything, and serve as our eyes, our ears, and our memories.

The Class of 2006 is known for its athletic abilities. On the fields and in the gyms the class with class can't be beat. But what would Big Blue athletics be without its fans? This is where the Blue Key Society comes in. As the spirit leaders on campus, Blue Key Heads attend every home game and get the crowd and teams psyched up to win. They are pillars of energy and enthusiasm to the student body throughout the whole year. (Not to mention, they also bring kisses to those who pay 25 cents on Valentine's Day.) In keeping with tradition, the Blue Key Heads wore their blue skirts and various BKH apparel this year, but the addition of crazy blue sun glasses that flash blue lights in the dark have made them the most fashionable ones in recent memory. Responsible not only for welcoming the new students into the community during orientation through cheers and games, but also for bringing spirit to the campus, the Blue Keys and their Heads embody the tradition of Andover pride.

Phillips Academy is often touted as having one of the best high school music programs in the country, and it's not hard to understand why. Graves is considered a sanctuary for many Andover students and home for a selected few. One can walk into the basement, where the practice rooms are located, on a Saturday night, and see the illustrious few practicing hard, while between 6 and 8 on a weeknight, the building's rehearsal spaces are sure to be overflowing with melodies. Between the different Orchestras and ensembles, vocal groups such as Fidelio and Cantata, the Concert Band, and the Jazz Band, over 200 student-musicians practice away diligently every week with their groups to produce breathtaking performances - everywhere from the holiday All-School Meetings to Jazz Brunches to Senior Recitals to the Veterans Day Ceremony.

Anyone who's ever been in a big show knows of the joys to tech week: the long hours working out all of those nitty-gritty particulars, the "oh-no-I'm-forgetting-my-lines" scares, and the tired and snappy people around. However, in the end, the shows always seem to be a great success. This year's Theater 520 shows have been exemplary shows. First in fall with Moliere's Tartuffe, then in winter with Shakespeare's Love's Labour's Lost, the dynamic acting between the hardened veterans and the young tender-foots, creative sets, and impeccable directing courtesy of Mr. Heelan the plays fell together into professional seeming productions. Winter term also produced a wonderful Andover traditional Broadway Review. After being taken away to become part of Skyline in 2004-2005, Broadway Review was brought back by popular demand and the audience was by no means let down by the exhibition of talents. As many staunch Andover theater fans would say, 2005-2006 was a great year of productions.

"Theater 520 is awesome. We build the set, we act, and we listen to Heelan. Listening to Heelan is fun. Acutally, listening to Heelan is better than watching most comedy movies."

As if our rigorous academic schedules and excessive athletic requirements aren't quite enough, the majority of Andover students fill the rest of their days participating in multiple student run organizations. From the Food Sampling Club to the Economics Society Incorporated (yes, legally,) we Andover students make use of the extensive list of student run organizations as an outlet for our many bizarre passions. What sets us apart from the rest of the students in the world is our downright determination. If by chance we don't have that perfect club, we do not despair; we simply create our own personalized clubs. We sing, we dance (what up Hypnotiq), we debate, and we do math problems for fun (what up math club). We welcome all; we even have a rally dedicated solely to advertising our clubs. Not too inconspicuously here at Andover do the politically driven students that make up the Democratic and Republican clubs lurk. Heated debate, political arguments, and insightful questions set apart these clubs from the rest. Andover Young Democrats sponsors the viewing of debates during election season and holds an election night party. Meanwhile, the Republican Club celebrates the policies of the current Republican administration, and members of the Republican Club hold aspirations for future jobs in government offices. However, the political clubs are hardly exclusive or elitist. Just as there are Democrats in Republican Club and vice versa, these clubs are open to all and eager for new members, may you be red or blue, elephant or donkey.

Andover offers a variety of clubs that provide opportunities for students to expand their horizons beyond academics and athletics by doing service to the community. Service clubs such as PA Environmental Club, Oxfam, Amnesty International, and Center for Global Justice give students a chance to work with other students for a good cause. These clubs also provide a crucial link between Andover and large global organizations that give students opportunity to make a difference. By creating a team of people driven for a united cause, and often united with the PA Community Service office, these clubs can make great change. Service clubs teach Andover students not only to give back to the community but also to work with diverse groups of people to make a difference.

The Philomathean Society and Model UN are two age-old traditions at Andover. Serving to introduce students to the importance of public speaking and quick thinking, both clubs unite students in a forum for political debate. Venturing to Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. this year on the annual Model UN trip and to other prep schools for debate tournaments, participants enjoyed making

One of the most important buildings for some PA students is the Chapel, located at the end of the Great Quad, and home to both the Religious & Philosophy Studies Department and various religious student organizations. Although Phillips Academy is non-denominational, the Cochran Chapel provides ample opportunity for students and faculty members to practice any religion, as do the many religious-affiliated clubs on campus. From C.H.I.L.L. to the Hindu Student Union, religious-affiliated organizations give students who choose to practice their religion some personal time away from the bustle of school. These clubs also educate the greater student body about their respective beliefs. These clubs open one of the many doors of Phillips Academy community and the fact that most of these organizations are student-run only goes to show you that PA students know what they need and how to attain it.

What better way to unwind than to do art? Granted, some may think back to those Art 200 days and say that art is just another stress factor, but many others know that forgetting about academics and letting those artsy juices free is a great way to spend an awesome hour with friends. The talented and budding artists go to Art Club, or Panel One for some serious and structured lessons in expressions. Those who aren't so talented with those crumbly charcoals have the opportunity to go to less intensive clubs and let out that pent up creativity in Crafts Club or Swing Club. And, depending on how stressful and confined the week shapes up to be, some people decide to go to all of them.

Some Andover clubs and organizations give students a chance to not only branch out from the academic world, but also to focus more specifically on aspects within the academic workplace. They allow students to work along side other motivated students to develop their skill and interests in a certain field. This experience not only gives more insight and knowledge into a field but also may help students find an interest that they wish to pursue beyond Andover.

Leisure. A word rarely uttered in the hallowed halls of Phillips Academy. As the busy students we are (or claim to be), very few of us acknowledge having any time to spend on leisure. However, the multitude of clubs that cater to the ever-so-precious leisure time of a PA student is growing, showing that despite being caught up in work and sports, some of us still have time to indulge ourselves. Some of us blow off some steam with intense games at Badminton Club or intense arm-twisting at Diplomacy Club, while others just like to sit back and conjure new words at Scrabble Club. While the expert grillers can be seen at athletic games under Andover Barbeque Society, the ballers among us can be seen taking on Andover High in Ping Pong Club. The clubs celebrate the fact that leisure time, as otherworldly as it may seem to us, is still not forgotten at Andover.

Andover Barbeque Society grills to raise money for the American Cancer Society. We grill at various outdoor sports events such as football games. It's a very fun club to be a part of, we make good food

Every Andover athlete knows well those few nanoseconds before the game begins - those few moments before the gun is fired, before the puck is dropped, before the whistle is blown - those few moments in which every hope, every doubt, every ounce of confidence, and every bit of fear mingle together into one indescribable feeling of anticipation. Only true athletes really understand this feeling for it is in this feeling that the true desire to win is manifested.

This is something that every Andover athlete seems to have: this gutsy spirit that drives us past our limits, never leaving us satisfied. When we win, we are thirsty for another victory. When we lose, we are hungry for revenge. And so we train, we practice, we push each other, never giving up until our relentless appetite for conquest is satisfied. It must be intimidating to look across the field and see those blue demons, those bloodthirsty Andover athletes that never go down without fight. Nothing seems to distract these blue machines in their quest. They work through the burning sensation they feel in their lungs and the cold rain they feel on their backs. Mud is caked on their shoes and all up their legs.

Now you may ask yourself, "Why do we do it?" Why do we willingly suffer through each and every match? What is it that could possibly inspire us to give so much of ourselves each day from 3:15 to 5:00? Why do we care so much? It's more than our mere desire to win for the sake of winning. It's more than our own personal pursuits for glory and honor. So, then, why do we do it? We do it for each other. We do it because we know our teammates are doing the same for us. Athletics at Andover is about more than just determination, discipline, and success. It's about trust, integrity, respect, and love for

And so in the heavy, humid heat of late September, we'll be there for each other. In the icy, bitter rain of early March, we'll be there for each other. Even in the fierce New England snow during winter term, we will be there for each other - ready to battle in the name of the Big Blue. Bring it on. We'll be there.

New England Girls Champions crosscountry

girls season 5-1
boys season 6-0

The girls' varsity and JV cross country team emerged from the 2005 season as the fastest team in New England for the first time since 1999. Andover's Varsity team snatched the first place title away from the six-year defending champions, Exeter, and Andover's JV team swept its championship race with all of its 10 runners coming in the top 11 places. The team's biggest match of the year came on Andover's home course against rival Exeter. Without top runners Erika Roddy '07 and Abby Levene '09, Andover fell to Exeter in a heartbreaking 31-24 loss. Yet after suffering its only loss of the season, Andover rebounded to fight for the New England title. Indeed, it was Andover's depth that secured a first place finish for the team. Two Exeter runners finished in the top five, but Andover's depth carried the team to the win as Andover captured places six through nine. The girls' cross country team proved that the year 2005 will always be remembered as "Our Year." From Blueberry Hill to Sumos to team dinners and pumpkin carving, this year's team has shown New England that spirit and speed, passion and victory, and fun and success all go hand in hand.

The boys' cross country team finished a strong, undefeated season with a second place finish at the New England Championships at both the Varsity and Junior Varsity levels. The team was both young and inexperienced with only five returning Varsity letter winners. For the first time in recent memory, Andover ran three freshmen in the varsity race – an accomplishment that bodes well for the future of the team. Early on, the team proved to doubters that this young collection of runners, many new to the sport, could make things happen. A commanding victory at the Canterbury Invitational over several league competitors helped to boost the confidence of the team and sent out a stoic message. At Interschols, successful Andover finishes were not enough to offset Exeter's achievement of 5 runners in the top 15, and the team earned second place. However, it was a victorious season overall, and the team returns all but five starters, eyeing the potential for another successful season.

Before one game she gave us all light switches and told us to turn them on. From then on we always made sure that everyone had their switch/their game, turned on. We all became best friends throughout the season and made a lot of memories. It was an amazing season and we're sure there will be more to come. Keep the Faith.

The 2005 season was the most memorable and the team was the best group of girls with which we have ever played. We had a very good season, finishing with only three defeats, the last of them to New England champs, Hotchkiss. We were sad for the season to be cut short because we had all become such close friends. The team definitely encompassed the three words we wore on the back of our pinnies "Hustle, Heart, and Commitment". We motivated each other with encouraging emails and always giving each other something we like to call "mini hugs" around campus. We have a tradition of excellence and expected everyone to be proud to be a part of the PA field hockey team. We had a lot of fun continuing traditions such as dressing up on Halloween and having homemade team dinners every weekend. On long bus rides we had fun dance parties, but we also knew when it was time to be serious and intense. Our coach Kate Dolan was constantly finding ways to motivate us..

The 2005 Phillips Andover football season was full of much excitement and high expectations. After three disappointing seasons, the team was ready for a change. The Big Blue, led by Captain Matt Ward and experienced Seniors Joey Lokitis, Tom Tassinari, Mason Fried, and Dave Giller, put out a team that also included 9 outstanding PG's and several promising underclassmen. Andover had a very strong offense, scoring at least 24 points in each game. Joey Lokitis quarterbacked the offense that featured an explosive running back tandem of Seniors Charlie Houghton and Matt Fernandez, each breaking numerous school records. Wide receivers Tassinari, Andrew Badger '06, and Jason Soule '06 forced opposing teams to respect the passing game. The line was outstanding all year with the combination of Giller, Colin Serafino '06, and Mike Bourbeau '06. The defense, too, was one of the best PA had seen in years. Led by linebackers Ward, Fried, and Brendan Gallagher '06, it was able to clean up and execute the plays that the defensive line of Serafino, Bourbeau, and Andrew Appolonia '06 allowed them to make all season. The team lived up to its promise, going 8-0 in the regular season, and earning itself a berth in the NEPSAC bowl. The team had big wins against defending champion New Hampton and Deerfield Academy, Worcester Academy, and Exeter. Although the team lost in the championship game, the season will be remembered as one of the best in PA football history.

The 2005 soccer season was a memorable one. No one game or moment can summarize the significance of the 2005 season for the players, program and school. Not the second half come-back to tie Brooks in the opening game. Not the 3 goal lead we conceded to keep fans excited in a 5-3 win over Loomis. Not the big Ginger scoring countless goals from the center back position. Nor Merzudin "Zoom" Ibrić '06 scoring a goal worthy of being on Sports Center's top 10 plays. Not even TJ earning All-American and best player in New England. Not Pumi Maqubela '06 out-jumping a 6'7 player to win a head ball against Exeter. Not Wu shutting down every mid-field in New England by himself. Nor Campbell running onto the field to celebrate after Alex Clifford's '07 goal to beat NMH in the last minute. The 2005 season for the girls' varsity soccer team was truly unforgettable. Though our record wasn't as perfect as we had hoped, we still had an amazing season. With 5 wins, 6 losses, and 3 ties, we leave the season with great memories – playing Choate as it turned dark in the pouring rain, beating NMH under the stadium lights (in the dance-off too!), notching eight goals to defeat Groton, and scoring a header off a corner kick against Exeter. But our memories will extend beyond the field to our team dinners, fun team psyches, and our infamous pep rally dance. We came together as a team this year, we worked hard for each other, and we had a great season as a result! Our motto, "whatever it takes," has taken on a new meaning as we finish this season.

In early September when varsity athletes returned to school from their summer vacations, the volleyball season began. With twenty-four qualified girls trying out, it was hard to choose the top twelve. But after the final decisions were made we began training for our opening match against Loomis. After the first game, it was clear that Andover volleyball would be a force with which to be reckoned. As other top teams began losing, we remained on top, beating past rivals such as Taft, Choate, and of course, Exeter. The starting team consisted of Claire Fox '06, Caroline Levin '06, Jackie Price '06, Sarah Thomas '06, and Lovers Cassidy Carpenter and Atima Lui. When this powerful six came together, there were few teams that could compete. We finally met our match in the finals of the New England Championship when we faced Hotchkiss. The 2005 season was one of the best seasons for Andover boys' water polo in recent memory. The team started out the season with two wins over rival Loomis Chafee, a team Andover had not beaten in over seven years. These wins set the course for the rest of season. The team came into the final week with its only losses to Exeter and Choate, but could not finish the regular season on a high note. Due to losses to Hotchkiss and Williston in close games, Andover was forced to play a playoff game against Williston the subsequent Wednesday for the fourth seed at the Final Four tournament. We played a tight game, which ended in an overtime win. The Big Blue was up by three goals in the fourth quarter, but due to some faulty defense, the game was sent into overtime. Thanks to the stellar defense, however, of Jeff "Abs Machine" Zhou '06 and the scoring ability of Scott "Jupiter Sunrise" McColl '07, Andover came home with a win. The following Saturday, Andover traveled to Hotchkiss for the Final Four tournament. The Big Blue got dominated by league champs Exeter in the first game, but finished the season off on a high note with a third place victory over Choate, thanks to the great goal work by William "He's Only 14" Faulkner '09, the offensive power of Howie "Long Arm of the Law" Kalter '07, and captain Jamie "Trap-asaurus" Neuwirth '06.

For the past week, the saga of the Lower scrub team has riveted campus. We've laughed and cried with these unlikely heroes, the fifteen-odd prepubescent cluster rejects who came together over the final weeks of the season to fasten together two important victories and forge an entrance into the cluster final. But the impossible dream came to a close this Friday, as the Lower team went down in a blaze of gunfire, 6-1, to the Abbot squad...Standout performances for the 'A' team came from Captain Daniel Wagman '06 with four goals in the first half and from Rosie DuPont '06 and [Justin] Waite '07, who each put away one...As for the Lowers, Zach Johnson '08 once again captained his team well, scoring the only goal and distributing several great passes that were gobbled up by Abbot defenders...Johnson said, "It was heartbreaking out there. I was hoping we'd be able to ride our momentum coming from last week, but we just couldn't pull it together. Maybe it was the hostile crowd or the weather but we weren't the same team that we were last week."

The 2005-2006 Boys' Basketball team had an unfortunate beginning to its season as the team dropped its first four games. The players, however, rebounded quite nicely after winter break, winning the next four games with clutch wins over Choate, Holderness, Milton, and Tabor with Captain Joey Lokitis '06 scoring his 1000th career point in the Choate game. Unfortunately, during the Tabor game, Lokitis suffered a calf injury which would keep him out of the next seven games. Without Lokitis, Uppers Matt Silva, Will Sherrill, and Chris Bramwell carried the load for the Big Blue. The team was only able to win one of these seven games however, therefore ending any playoff hopes. In their final game of the season against Exeter, they lost a very close but exciting match in which they led by four points with 2 minutes left in the game. Although due to injuries, the team which had shown promise at the beginning of the season was not able to continue its early success into the rest of the season, there is one thing that is certain - every time the Big Blue stepped out onto the court, they gave it their all.

Although the 2005-2006 girls' varsity basketball season did not produce the record we had hoped for, we were able to grow as a team and finish the season with high hopes for next year. We proved that we were unaffected by long bus rides when we had two exciting last second wins against Loomis and NYMPH. However, we were unable to size up against the huge players on top teams such as Tabor, Nobles, and Worchester Academy. Our offense was led by guards Kristen MacDonald '07, Jackie Price '06, Kelly Fox '08 and post dominators Claire Fox '06 and Sarah Beattie '07. Whenever we needed to shut down the other team's offensive threat, Kara Hollis was brought in to play her relentless defense. With a year under their belts, the new coaching staff will team with next year's senior leaders Kristen MacDonald, Sarah Beattie, Kara Hollis, and Stuart Anderson, to lead the team to success!

Phillips Academy boys' hockey certainly expected to be extremely successful this season. With such an old team, leadership was plentiful and the team was tightly knit. After coming out in the first game with a tie against Lawrence, the Big Blue rolled right into winter break with wins over Proctor, Pingree and St. Paul's. The boys stayed during winter break for a couple of games and the annual Flood-Marr Tournament. The team did not do as well as they had hoped. Returning in January, the boys regained their composure with heavy wins over Holderness and Choate. In the first Andover vs. Exeter competition, despite the tough Exeter crowd, Andover tied the game, and was victorious with a late 3rd period goal. Andover repeated against St. Sebastian's. The boys continued on with a number of decisive victories, only dropping one game to Nobles, with big wins over Deerfield, Belmont Hill and GDA. Coming down the stretch they were not as successful, ending the season with some tough losses, which spoiled their playoff berth. The boys ended the season with tight loss to Exeter. For this team, this was their first loss to Exeter in years, boasting an undefeated record prior to the game. The team graduates sixteen, with six returning skaters and a wealth of goaltending. It was certainly a memorable year for boys' hockey, and the end to a string of years for most of the team. The returning players will be called upon to become the core of the team to form yet another successful season.

The girls' varsity hockey team had a great season finishing with a regular season record of 18-6 and the #6 seed in the playoffs. While only losing 3 seniors from last year, the team returned a lot of depth with 14 returnees including 4-year senior veterans Lindsay Moramarco, Melissa Tetreau, Julie Wadland, and Megan Montecalvo. This year's squad was especially strong between the pipes with 3 talented goalies. All the forwards stepped up their game this year, each line composed of all returning players, while the defense welcomed freshman Kaitlyn McInnis '09. The 2006 team started off strong with key wins against Tabor and Loomis and had a 3-1 outing at the Taft Tournament over winter break. The girls returned in January to continue their winning record with big wins over Cushing, Deerfield and Exeter. While dropping some games to powerhouses like Choate and Lawrence Academy, the team always played with heart and for each other. This year's team was extraordinary on and off the ice, having such strong team chemistry and a love for the game. Each player wanted success more for her team than her self and that is something that led to the success of this season and the build of this year's team. We live by the motto "Our Time. Despite a winter virtually devoid of snow, PA's nordic team enjoyed a strong 2006 season, as our enthusiasm never dipped even when we were unable to ski during practice. The spring-like conditions sent us consistently driving six hours round trip and 200+ miles every Wednesday afternoon to race courses in Vermont and New Hampshire that had enough snow to sustain tracks, which made for many late nights but also great team bonding. Nordic saw a huge influx of new members this season, who brought with them great attitudes and enthusiasm. Indeed, probably the most distinctive characteristic of the team this season was its great sense of camaraderie. We all look forward to racing together again next year because we could not have had a more positive season.

SLAM had one of the busiest seasons imaginable this winter. With five new members added to the roster, at times, it seemed impossible to teach everyone what they needed to know. However, by the second week into our season, it was clear that this team was going to be as strong, if not stronger than previous SLAM teams. Our goals for the season were to try new things, to do a new halftime almost every game, and to defend our title as the best step team in New England at competition. So far we have accomplished two out of the three, with our competition being April 1. Andover/Exeter weekend proved to be one of the greatest moments in the season as Exeter's step team challenged us to a step-off during halftime. After our first step, it became clear who the better team is. The tremendous support we receive after performing each game confirms our belief that every practice, every sleepover, and every moment spent on the court is worth it.

Boys' varsity squash started off the season with only three returning members. After a up and down year with a record of around .500, we traveled to the National High School Championships at Yale. It was this weekend that almost everyone on the team hit their peak. The team exceeded all expectations and finished 7th in the country out of all high school squash teams. While our record wasn't as good as it had been in previous years, I had more fun this season than any of my other four years on the team. Every single player improved as the season progressed but more importantly, we all got along well. From Bulldog Burrito at midnight to "The Shrew" viciously attacking our young freshman Graham, this season had more than a fair share of memories. Squash has helped define my four years at Andover, and I couldn't have asked for a better way to finish off my four years than with this group of boys.

"Led by the six seniors, our squash team was the closest team that I have ever been on. Every car ride, match, and tournament was more fun than the next. We pushed each other, joked with each other; and this great atmosphere was a major factor in our 7th place finish at the National Team High School Championships."

This squash season was so much fun, everyone improved greatly, and the team really came together. There was strong leadership from the two seniors, Pawina Jiramongkolchai and Lucretia Witte. Their enthusiasm for the sport really encouraged the other team members to play their hardest during both practice and matches. Perhaps the most memorable match was the first time that we played Exeter. Even though we lost a tough 4-3 battle, many of the matches were close and could have gone either way. Everyone focused on the skills we were working to develop in practice and played with great intensity.

I will also never forget how much fun everyone had with one another. Whether it was joking with each other during practice or playing games on the bus, the team became very close. The newcomers to the team, in particular freshmen Lydia Smith, Carolyn Brown, and Lauren Wilmarth, brought fresh enthusiasm to the team and the game. Occasionally reminded of their freshman status, these three took everything in stride and gave the season a light-hearted feeling.

Finally on behalf of the rest of the team, we want to wish Lucretia and Pawina the best of luck next year, and thank them for all that they have taught us!

The boys' varsity swim team had one of its most successful seasons in recent history this year. The boys showed up at Day 1 of preseason looking towards that ultimate goal. With an easy attitude and a spirit that could not be suppressed, the returning team conquered training both inside and outside of the pool. It soon became evident to both returnees and newcomers that we would become, not a group of individuals, but a single team.

With almost all of its returning line up, and fast new additions to the team, the boys expected a strong season. They remained undefeated throughout the entire season, upsetting the favored Exeter Boys team. This season marked the first season since 1973 that the Andover boys' swim team last beat their rival Exeter. The boys' swim team showed their heart again at Interschols with each member shattering his previous best times. The Boys finished second this year at Interschols, one of the strongest finishes in the past decade.

The boys' swimming team this year was not comprised of simply a few star swimmers, but a group of exceptional swimmers that came together as a team to rise to the challenge. Swimming seems like an individual sport on the surface, but the hours turned into days spent practicing have fostered a relationship beyond description.

In the words of our esteemed, "Check out these huge traps. Are you Serious?"

The Girls Varsity Swim Team swept through an undefeated season this year to claim its fifth consecutive New England Championship. Many key swimmers graduated in 2005 and the team was prepared for a rebuilding year, but with the addition of seven new freshmen, Andover dominated Interschols.

The season began with wins against perennial powerhouses Choate and Loomis. The momentum continued in the seniors' last home meet against NMH and Milton, where Andover's underclassmen presented the seniors with roses. In what next was expected to be the most competitive meet of the season, Andover decisively took down Hopkins. Andover concluded its regular season by dominating archival Exeter, 114-72.

Although Andover will graduate six seniors this year the talented underclassmen will surely continue the tradition of speed and spirit that has distinguished Andover for five years as the number one team in New England.

"We work together so well and push each other through the toughest (and easiest) of sets. We complement each other better than I could have ever imagined and each individual brings a unique quality to the team. With our high team spirit, we managed in each and every meet to come together as one team, despite the fact that the swimming itself is predominately an individual sport. In any case, everyday this team continues to amaze me with our support of each other along with our increasingly fast times."

"Being on an undefeated track team for 2 years was a great experience. The team always did what we needed to do at track meets and it was great to see all the hard work during practices pay off. I'll definitely miss the 'throwers' bond' once I graduate."

The girls' indoor track team finished off this season with a perfect record, beating Tewksbury, Willbraham-Monson, Andover High School, Masconomet, and Exeter! The distance squad was led by iron-women Seniors Becca Howe '06, Sarah Dowd '06, Alyse Kennedy '06, and Hannah Comeau '06, and lower sensation Sarah Cohan '08. Captain Marty Schnure '06, future captain Kit Harris '07, Mgbechi Erundu '06, and Carolyn Pollard '07 led the sprints and hurdles. The unstoppable Aba Temeng '06 owned the throws, Colleen Thurman '07 led the long jump, and Jeanette Francis '06 led the pole vault. The two meets that stand out in my mind are our ONE-POINT victory over our cross-town rivals Andover High and our four-point victory over Exeter. Early in the season against Andover High, we ran, threw, and jumped with strength and determination that we didn't yet know we had, pulling out personal records left and right. I have never seen a more exciting display of hard work, desire, sportsmanship, and intensity as I did at our meet against Exeter. I am in awe of this team and I feel immensely privileged to have led it. Amazing job, ladies!

As a scoring athlete, senior, and captain, this indoor track season has undoubtedly been my best. After suffering last year's painful losses, the team was eager to win again. Beating Andover High - where I ran my personal best in the 50y: 5.7seconds - was a huge morale booster for athletes old and new. Through intense training, we readied ourselves for the greatest challenge. Though Exeter was invincible on paper, we believed they could be beaten. We were right.

I have never seen such amazing feats as I did that day against Exeter. All our athletes performed heroically, fighting to the last inch and the last jump. That was also my best meet ever. Taking 1st place in the 50y was great; taking 1st in the 300y was even better, where I smashed my old personal best by 0.6seconds, slicing my time down to 35.86seconds. This final meet combined personal triumphs with the team's victory - I will not forget it.

I witnessed the results of effort and willpower that day. I learned that cheering till I'm hoarse and epic words of encouragement are worthwhile. I know that in a sport that is often so individually-focused, team unity still matters. I'm glad to have witnessed it all, I'm glad to have taken part, I'm glad to have led it. It has been a tremendous honor. Peace.

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made:
Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honey bee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;
There midnights all a-glimmer, and noon a purple glow,
And evening full of the linnet's wings.

I will arise and go now, for always night and day
I hear the water lapping with low sounds by the shore;
While I stand on the roadway, or on the pavements gray,
I hear it in the deep heart's core.

First and foremost, I want to thank my parents for raising me to be the man I have become. I also want to thank the Academy for the wonderful opportunities, educationally as well as athletically, that it has thrown my way. I'd like to acknowledge those members of the faculty and coaching staff that have made my high school experience special and have shaped my character more than they know:
Father Francisco Nahoe, Carl Bewig, Paul Kalkstein, Kathleen Pryde, William Scott, Mark Efinger, and Edwin Quattlebaum.

I want to shout out to the fellas in Stearns, my home on campus despite me being a day student; Todd, Edwin, Brendan, Randy, Wilmy, Terrance, Figgy, Clinton, and Rivas.

I'd like to express some Russia love to my droogies in rooskaya klassa: Andrea, Brendan, Daniel G., Kassie, Kira, Sarah X 2, and Tobey. We have spent the last four years together: from Bryn Mawr to Russia (With Love) and back. Stay cool, you guys.

At this point, I would also like to remind Kieren de Brun and Billy Cannon to remain no less than 100 yards away from my sister at all times. And no, Billy, you do not have my blessing to marry her.

Kevin McCarthy and Prateek Kumar, I will deeply miss our political debates. I love you guys and will still be unsure on who I'll cast my vote for in 2048 when you guys run for the presidency against each other.

Finally, I'd like to shout out to my brothers on the 2005 Varsity Football team. This past season was incredible and we are the greatest thing this school has seen in long time. Charging that field at the conclusion of the Exeter game will be a memory I will cherish for the rest of my life. We may not have walked away with the championship rings on our fingers, but we did leave this season with something infinitely more valuable: heart, the thing that encapsulates our class, commitment, character, and courage.

This page is dedicated to the other guys and gals whom I have forgotten to mention. You know who you are and what you mean to me. Remember that there will always be a place for you in my heart.

I will be forever grateful to you all for the memories.

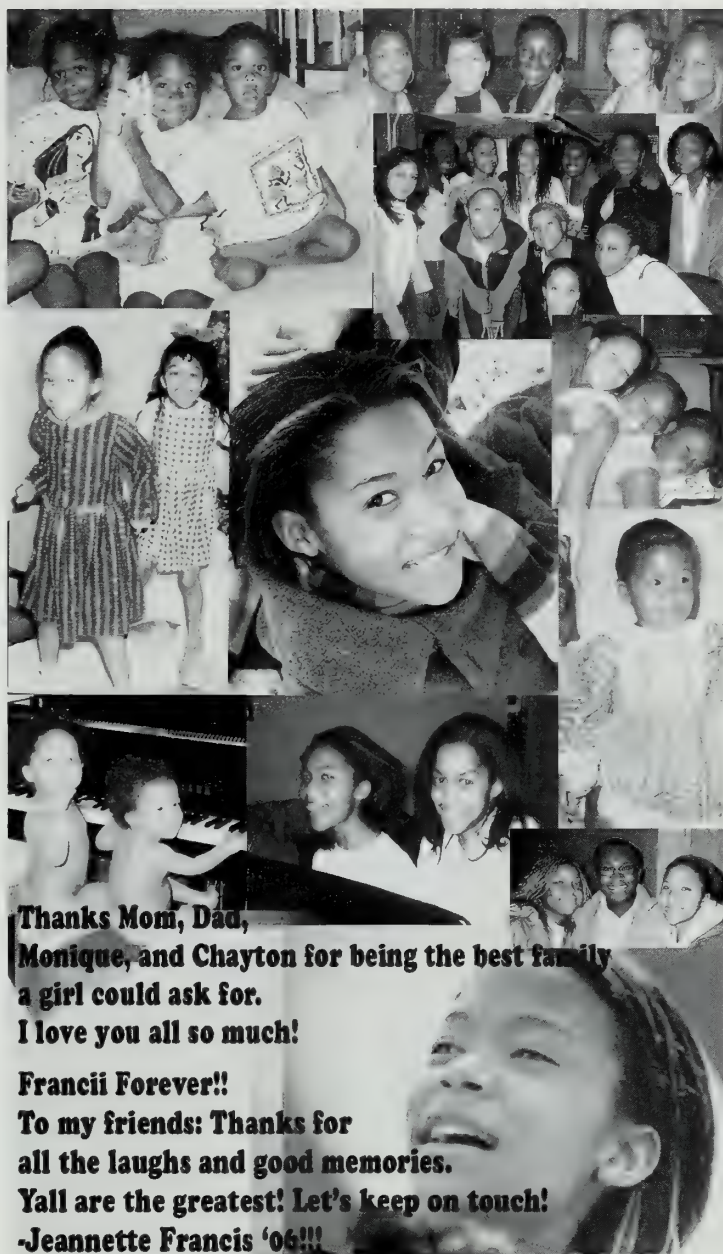

Well we know where we're goin'
But we don't know where we've been
And we know what we're knowin'
But we can't say what we've seen
And we're not little children
And we know what we want
And the future is certain
Give us time to work it out

Together they had overcome the daily incomprehension, the instantaneous hatred, the reciprocal nastiness, and fabulous flashes of glory in the conjugal conspiracy. It was time when they both loved each other best, without hurry or excess, when both were most conscious of and grateful for their incredible victories over adversity. Life would still present them with other moral trials, of course but that no longer mattered: they were on the other shore.

-Gabriel Garcia Marquez from Love in the Time of Cholera

I Love my mommy, daddy, and Matthew

Once upon a time there was a girl named Kira who got into Phillips Academy Andover and was pretty excited. But she was so shy and quiet that it took her awhile to make friends. When she did though, she realized she had met the most amazing group of people, a group which would continue to surprise and support her through four tumultuous years. She failed out of Chem, went to Russia, met her best friends, skied in circles around Siberia, lived on a Pueblo, ran at 6:30 in the morning in freezing weather, argued violently with friends over politics, tried random clubs, almost drowned trying to play water polo, took photo and philosophy and poetry and fell in love. Some of the worst things have happened to her, and some of the best. She's been stupid, she's been sorta smart. She's done a lot, because of PA, and even though she hated it more than anything in the world at times, she's glad she stuck it out.

FOUR YEARS? That's right.

Thank goodness it's finally over... although some of you were ok... ;) Love to ALL!!!!!!!!!!!! And especially to:

Mumso and Daddy - I would've dropped out over a million times if you guys hadn't been there cheering me on. I can't thank you enough. You are the most amazing people in the world. Thanks for being there for me every second of every tear filled night. I love you so so much.

My ladies!!!! (Sneak around much?) Nan, best friends since freshman year. You're like a sister. Thanks for putting up with my ridiculousness. You know how much I love you. Katya, oh my god, Russia, Bryn Mawr, late night phone calls... We've been through so much... You are the sweetest, kindest person I know. NEVER EVER change. Lindz, you are the most sarcastic, cynical, and funniest girl in the world. You've been through a lot and you have no idea how much respect I have for you. You're an awesome, awesome person.

Emma - You're a pain in the butt. Thanks for making me laugh when I wanted to give up. Love you.

Baba and Jiji - Thanks for driving me around when I just wanted to come home to sleep and for doing everything you could to help.

Love to everyone,

"Wherever you go, no matter what the weather, always bring your own sunshine."

It can't all be done in a senior page, but here goes: Mom and Dad: love you. Anthony- it was awesome to have you around freshman year. Sarah- it's awesome to have you at school now. Spiak- you've always had the ability to make me laugh. You're brilliant and the strongest person I've ever met. Mr. Domina- you've been my mentor since the cottage and I hope to continue learning at our traditional meal, whatever form that takes in the future. Ben- You've always been a true friend/G. I think back to cranking bass in your room, super bowl parties, shake and bake and the other innumerable good times we've had. Joey- I'll never forget dope times in Draper and French and I know you'll be livin' like a G for lyfe because you've truly got it all. Sam- aside from the countless inside jokes that were born in your basement, you've showed me how to have fun and live life to the fullest. Neuwirth-you've always made me laugh. Pumi- you've come a long way from "strictly business" Pumi, and I know you'll continue to do great things. TJ- I can always count on you for a good laugh or a dope soccer move. Tanisha-we've had a good four years, hope we stay in touch. Wardo-we've been friends since pre-school and I hope we keep that up. Melissa- you're a genuinely nice person. Tess-you were my first Andover friend and since the beginning you've been a source of comfort, joy and friendship. Jevan-you're hilarious. It's awesome to have someone I can be goofy with. Jamie-we don't always see eye to eye, but I feel like we're better friends for it and I hope we stay friends. Tom- we went through a lot during the roommate years. You've always been there for me and I appreciate that. Lindsay- you're the coolest girl I know and you've got an amazing sense of humor. Clyfe- we have learned a lot together. You've taught me a lot about teamwork and leadership. JP- whether its late nights in Hearsey or Foxcroft, the past three years have been sweet and your college years will be a complete danglefest. Meg- it's been good knowing you. Lippe- you're a G with a magnetic personality. Hearsey for life, respect. Jake- you're the man. Undeniably. Glory days in Hearsey have been real and I hope they continue. Margaret-wise beyond your years. You're always willing to listen to me and laugh with me. Thanks. Julie- you're talent amazes me sometimes, you're a terrific leader and person. Mason-you're always teaching me and I'm glad that you and I can talk about anything and everything. Mr. McGraw- I can always count on you for epic anecdotes, pearls of wisdom and gourmet pizza. The Halls and The Weiners- I couldn't have made it this far in school without your shelter/support. Ali- If you're not making me laugh you're helping me learn. Whitney- you're smart, funny, and always honest. Shoutouts: Krugman, Platt, Stacey, Rob, George, Jess, Mr. Dougan, Don Sweeney, God, Mr. Scott, Dr. Kane, Sra. Pages Rangel, Mr. Pepper, and Coach Lou. Peace out Andover.

Do not burn yourselves out. Get out there and mess around with your friends, ramble out yonder and explore the forests, encounter the grizz, run the rivers, climb the mountains, breathe deep that sweet yet lucid air, sit quietly for a while and contemplate the precious stillness, that lovely, mysterious, and awesome space. Enjoy yourselves, keep your brain in your head and your head firmly attached to your body, your body active and alive, and I promise you this much; I promise you this one sweet

My two loves right here ↑

- Jamie Love, I love you. For eight years now, we have been through a lot and have always understood each other's strange ways. Take care and I'll "see ya later."

- McMahon, "well helloooo, it's my little friend with his little dreams..."- you are probably one of the most genuine people I know; not to mention hilarious. Don't know what I would have done without you.

- Monaco, I will never be able to say your name without instantly becoming retarded haha MiKeL!

- Danny, you are so sweet. It's hard to believe I was intimidated by you back in the day when we played hockey together. Good times.

- Eunice and Rach, lets just say you made my days so much more interesting. Eunice, Vaughn and Scofield will always keep us connected and Rach; I blame you for all my cuts.

- '06 Hockey girls- Linz and Wads, you two are the greatest line mates ever. Monte and Mac, I appreciate the help getting my stuff down from the top shelf of my locker since my little legs couldn't reach. (Yes Clegg, I'm short)

- Jamie and Clegg- I had to put you two in here. Keep being you and you'll be alright.

The Pot Pourri Board would like to dedicate the 2006 Pot Pourri in the loving memory of our fallen companion George Hattermer '06. George was, for many of us, far beyond simply a classmate; he was a fellow athlete, a skilled Ultimate Frisbee player, a Techmaster who was never hesitant to extend his expert help to his comrades in technological distress, an inventor, an explorer, a free spirit, and most importantly, a friend who could be counted on to provide endless hours of fun and laughter, interesting conversation, and comforting companionship. George parted ways with us before the beginning of his Senior year, but in many ways he still remains amongst us - in spirit and in the memories that many of us shall no doubt cherish for a lifetime. From all of us that had the good fortune knowing George, thank you for the beautiful memories. Forever '06.

I love you to the moon, and I'll always be your lulubelle. Thanny: I just think you are the sweetest, funniest, coolest, smartest kid in the whole world and I can't believe how lucky I am to have you. Thanks for everything. Hales: You are the best sister and truly a "wonder of the world." I will miss you next year! Jules&Linds: Seven years and counting and I got nothin' but love. Jevan: Remember when we were in Hawaii and we stumbled upon that waterfall, and it was so amazing and so incredible and so totally perfect? Well, that's you to me. Bridesmaids? Tanisha&Whit: Our nights of dancin' and singin' and cuddlin' and car rides are some of the happiest times in my whole life. I have unconditional love for you, which means that distance don mean a thing. Mames: Like sisters. Thanks for keeping me in line, I love that about you. Michael: You know that I struggle with using my words (especially when asking the time, etc.) but to me, you will always be less than three. I love you, 404 around the world. Kristin: I would sleep on a wood floor for you any day of the week. I love you little mouse. Mer&Chi&PotPo: We made it! XOXO. ACES: PRIDE, TRADITION, LOVE! Kate: Thank you, for everything. All my love. Kennan&Cindy&Susan: I admire you three so much and I hope someday to be as successful as you are. I am forever thankful for your endless love and support. To JDWilliams, Mr. Carr, Ms. Buck, Mrs. Spiak, Bardos, Frieds, Joels, Jammals, Moramarcos, Halls: You have taught me, inspired me, and raised me. You have achieved a lot in your four years at Andover. None of it has been a surprise to us though because you possess all the tools and abilities to achieve all you want to achieve, we are just so happy you found the strength to persevere through good and bad times, to find success at so many different levels. We could not be more excited to embark on the next phase of your life with you! You have taught us so much about life (being selfless, carefree, and compassionate), we just hope you have learned a thing or two from us too...

Matt:

You came, you saw and you certainly did conquer! With all that you had to live up to, you did, and then you took it to the next level.

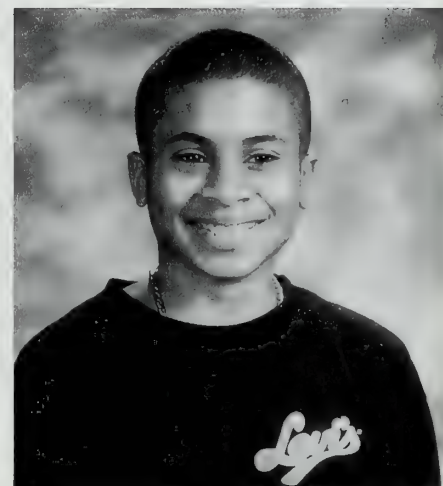

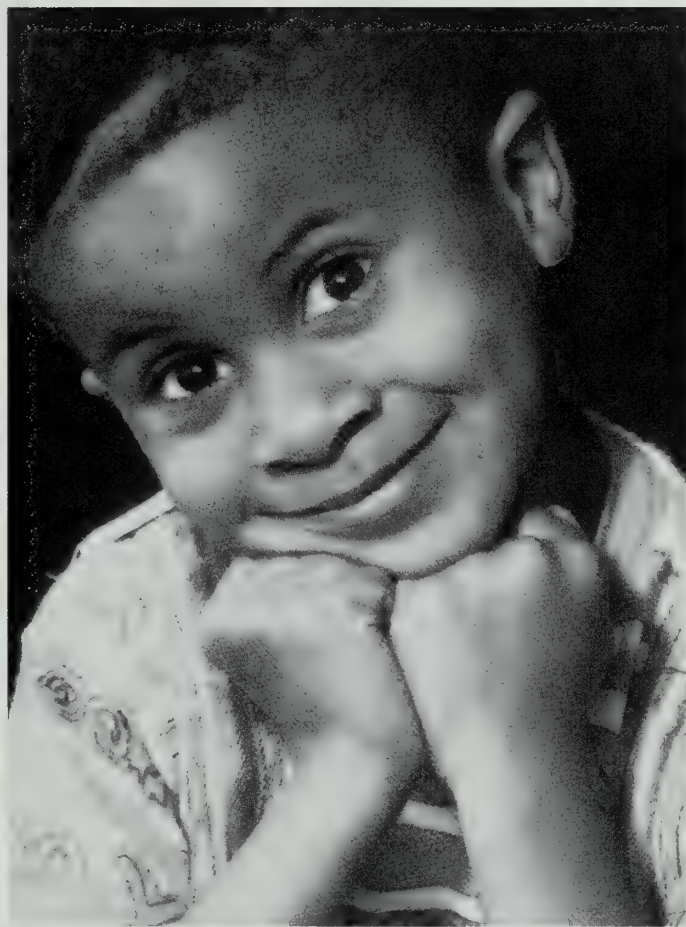

You are an "Andover kid," a true friend, a fierce competitor and fearless of all things. Whether it was a math problem to solve, a paper to write, a friend in need or someone in another color uniform, you always showed your true character.

As you leave this place, that you have always loved (tough love sometimes), and move on to great things, a part of you will forever remain behind.

There are no words to express how much we love you and how proud we are of all your accomplishments! Congratulations!

TERRENCE GREEN

Terrence,
I'm so proud of all of your accomplishments. You have excelled since you were in the first grade, and you've been consistent all of the way to your senior year. I know that you have been through a lot in your High School years. You deserve a lot of credit for standing on your own two feet. I'm proud of you and I love you soooooo much!

potpourri 2006

From the basement of Morse Hall, the Pot Pourri staff presents the 2006 edition of Pot Pourri. Here and Now is Phillips Academy Andover's 119th edition of the Pot Pourri. Phillips Academy Andover is located at 180 Main Street in Andover, Massachusetts. The 2006 Pot Pourri board selected the theme Here and Now with the help of Susan and Steve while attending the Herff Jones Yearbook Camp at Bridgewater State College during July of 2005.

Layouts were designed on our two Dell Intel Pentium 4 computers joined through the Phillips Academy server. To create each spread, the staff used InDesign CS2. The photos were edited using Adobe Photoshop. The submission of the book was done using CDs.

This year we continued to include the portraits section in the Pot Pourri with the help of Davor Photography Company, located in Newton Highlands, Massachusetts. Each of our photographers used a Canon Digital Rebel XT to capture Andover.

Out of 438 pages, 64 are color pages, 32 of which are parent ads. Tess Scott designed the cover for the 2006 Pot Pourri with the help of Herff Jones. Tess Scott, Merit Webster, and Chioma Erundu designed all the endsheets and dividers. Our 8.5x11 cover was blind embossed with spot black 26 overtone rub. The price of the yearbook is $100 and includes a spring supplement. 850 copies were printed.

All sections were created using AHJ Function font. None of this would have been possible without the help of our advisors Cindy Efinger and Kennan Daniel, and our Herff Jones yearbook representative, Susan Happel.

Thank you to everyone who made this yearbook possible – our amazing advisors Kennan Daniel and Cindy Efinger, the lovely Susan Happel, Elliot Hacker, everyone at Central Services, Herb Morton, Steve (for the cover and for the best life advice), and most of all, the support of the faculty, administration, and student body. Thank you again and again.

"I feel my best
when relaxing
with my friends on the Great Lawn in the sun"

Some Kind of Wonderful

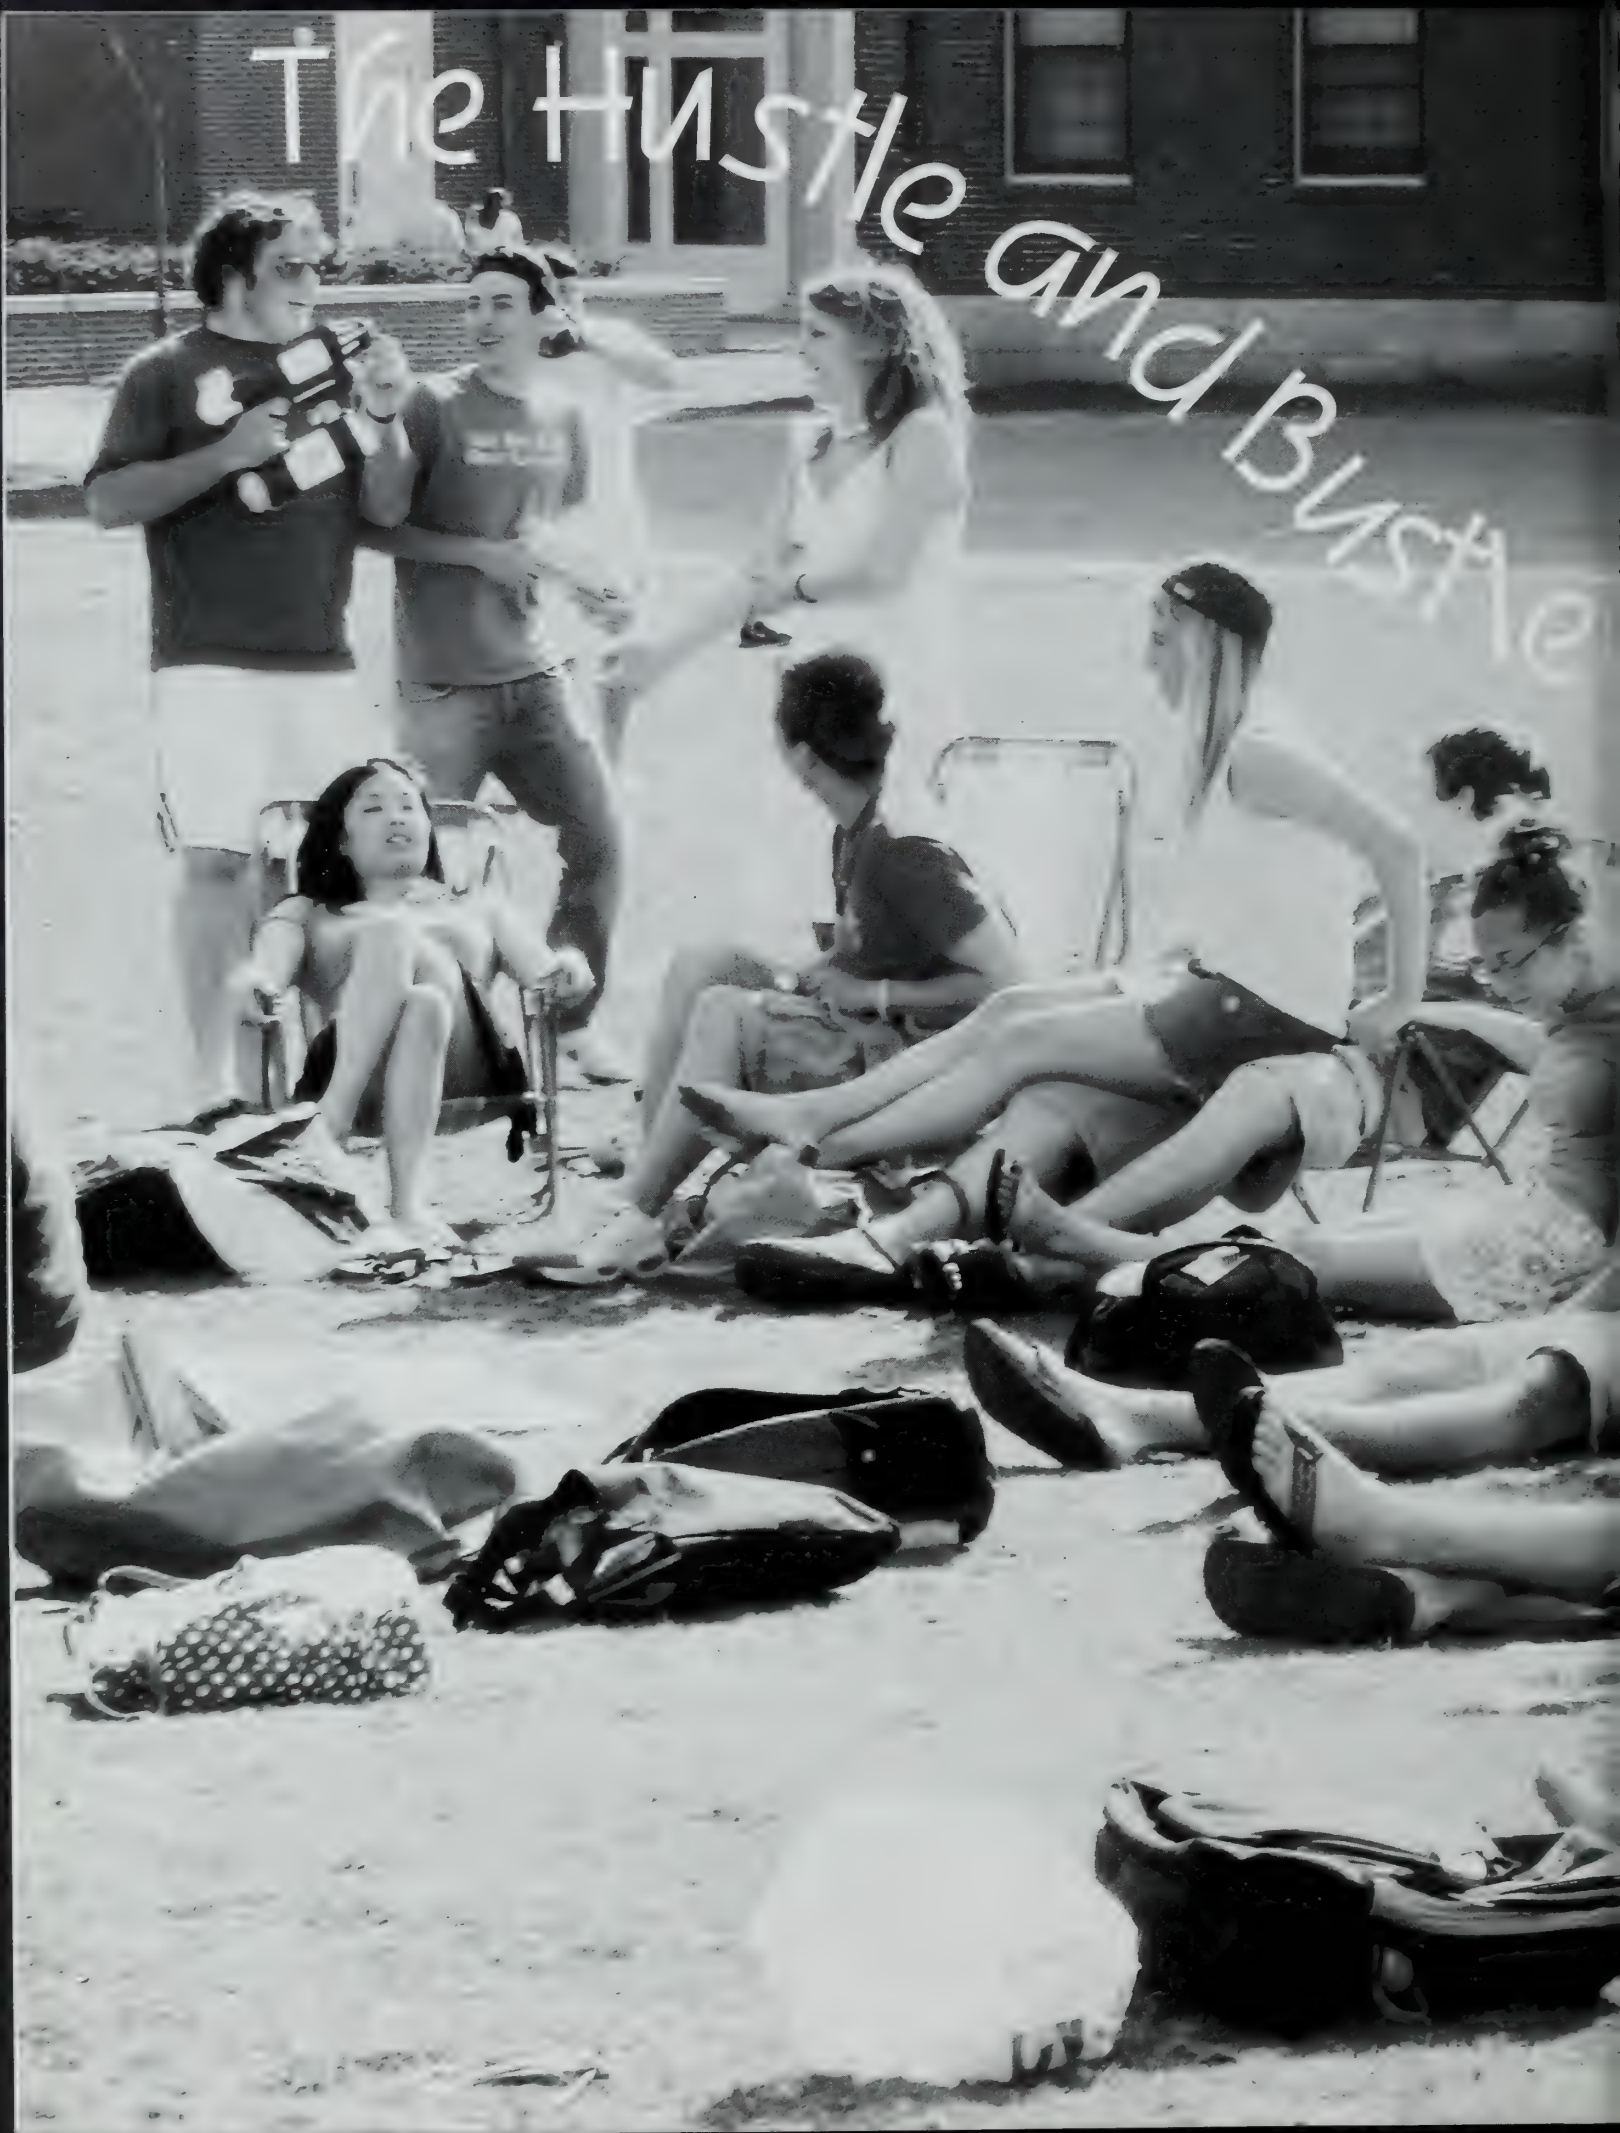

The theme for this year's Pot Pourri spring supplement is Code Blue. Before my devoted Grey's-Anatomy-watching-friends clued me into its literal definition, I gave Code Blue my own meaning.

Andover's weathered structures remind us of the boarding school stereotype where rules are enforced with leather bull-whips and wooden rulers. While Andover does not practice corporal punishment, it does require its students to follow general guidelines. We can safely assume that tucked among the health insurance and emergency information forms in each of our annual back-to-school-packets is the newest publication of The Blue Book. Those of you who obeyed the stern commandments of your cluster dean and actually read this royal blue book know that the administration diligently lists all the rules of the academy, including the proper way to obtain car permission, and day excuses, and what happens when students choose not to abide by these guidelines. Can there really be 68 pages of rules and nine levels of disciplinary actions? We are incessantly reminded of these policies and, as Winter Term pointed out, constantly pushing their limits as well.

Actually, in medical terms, Code Blue means that there is an imminent loss of life; the patient has stopped breathing and the heart has stopped beating. "Great," I thought... "heart-attack! Not exactly the word I was looking for to represent Andover in the spring time." The yelling of this code, however, also signals doctors and nurses to initiate resuscitation. Therefore, Code Blue also means to revitalize, to bring back to life.

Spring term at Andover is all about having fun. After a long east coast winter, spring break represents the beginning of a new term and new life. Those foreign to Phillips Academy may accuse Andover students of working all the time. Yet, as you will see in the pages that follow, sunglasses, beach chairs, wiffle balls, flip-flops, and the vibrant cherry blossom tree illuminate the lightheartedness in the kids that we are. Spring is the term to enjoy Andover, follow our own codes, and celebrate life. — Sara Nickel '07, Editor-In-Chief

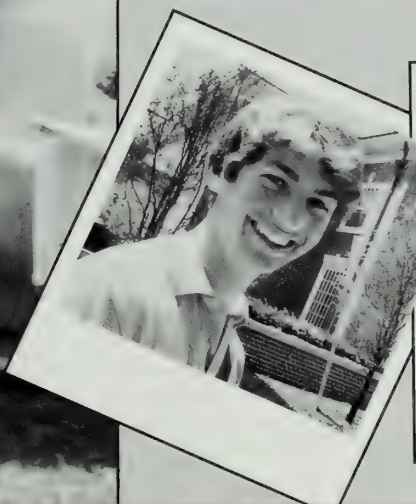

The Hustle and Bustle

Student Life

Student Life during spring term is all but a bed of roses. Putting the winter coat away once and for all is the liberating experience that opens the door to a lighter, funner spring term. Even uppers who, once taking off their mittens, can never turn back, make it out to the Great Lawn every once in a while, if not just to test that their eyes still work in the daylight. Meanwhile, you can find seniors frolicking on the Great Lawn at almost all hours of the day. The Student Activities Board keeps those night-owls and Ryley Room fanatics among us entertained with dances ranging to any theme imaginable. We are provided with a world of other activities come Friday night – anything from heated trivia competitions to passionate jello-wrestling contests. Spring term widens the range of fun, if quirky, options available to us. As we flock outside to the lawns – weather and grass growing techniques permitting, that is – we never fail to invent our own array of warm-weather pastimes. Kiddie pools and Tenni-Golf (as well as Meatstik and Slip'n'Slides, if and when they can be revived) are proof that Andover students can always find a creative way to enjoy their social life. Though some of us may dread the feeling of routine and habit now, that same feeling of familiarity will be what triggers nostalgia for our Andover days in years to come. No matter what the time of day, no matter what the weather, and no matter whether you're in the mood to be a hula dancer or a rodeo star, student life at Andover has just the right spice to keep you entertained.

Q: What did you do to get ready for the Luau?

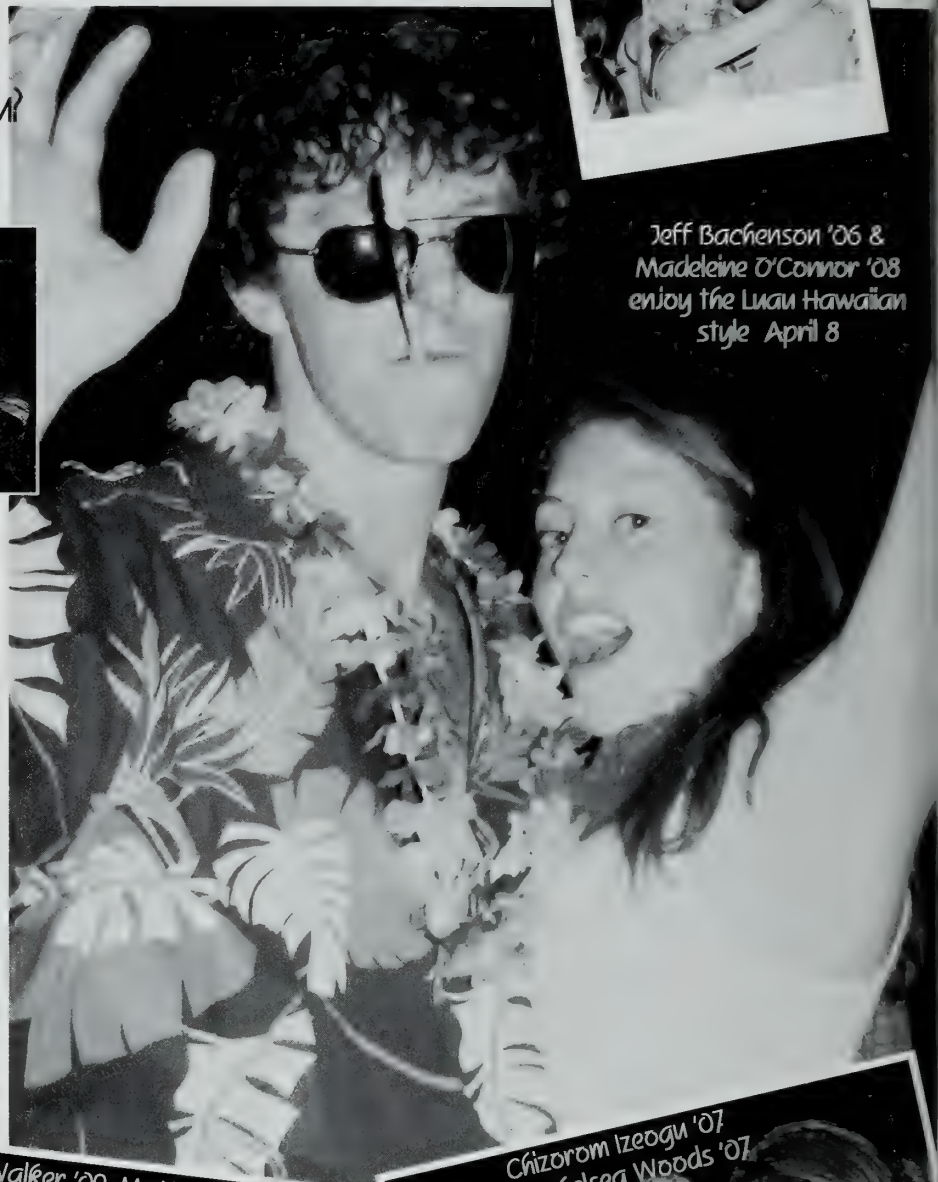

A I love getting ready for dances with the Nathan Hale girls. We always turn up the music; for this dance we listened to the Beach Boys! Sophia Lee even wore a grass skirt! - Sarah Boylan '09

A I heard that when you get off the plane in Hawaii that they give you a lei. That has always been a dream of mine, but for now, the Luau dance will have to do.

Upper Spring Fling

Socializing • Bonding • Mrs. Chase

For the past eight months, Uppers have battled their course work and the stress it has invoked. After a Spring Term filled with AP exams, term papers, college counseling, and SATs, Uppers have emerged victorious, or at least alive. Head of School, Barbara Chase rewarded the class of 2007 for a job well done by hosting the Upper Spring Fling. Though the regular setting—Mrs. Chase's backyard—was rained out, Uppers enjoyed this chance to bond and practice showing their class pride before becoming Seniors.

Prom

Seniors • Live Band • Boston

Prom 2006 was held after the last exam, after all the underclassmen left campus. As juniors snuggled into their own beds and ate homemade food for the first time in months, seniors and some upper and lower youngsters danced into the wee hours of the morning. The first half of Prom took place in a hotel overlooking a beautiful twinkling city skyline. Here students ate dinner and danced to a live band. They then proceeded to sail around Boston Harbor on the Spirit of Boston, moving between the ship's three levels of food and music. Prom was a great chance for Seniors to party as the Class of 2006 for the last time before graduation.

Code Blue

Whether you are a junior in Art 200 or an upper in History 310, life at Andover is busy. Even discounting the insane workload that we all know and love, students at PA are constantly bombarded with activities to fill our tiny slots of free time. Ryley dances, cluster munches, and theater and music productions are a must. Meanwhile, the Great Lawn in warm weather and bagels (and toaster lines) during conference period have their own places in our hearts. It is in observing the way in which the Andover student takes advantage of his or her free time that we can truly understand the code: Blue. The Code encompasses things ranging from the most comfortable lounge-spot on campus: duh! Blaine's couch, to which place has the best hot chocolate?: Dean of Student's office! But Code Blue includes not only the ins and outs of our campus, but also the quirks and eccentricities of our student body. Though we do not all know each other, we share common experiences. The bonds that tie us, classes 2006-2009, are strong. We have all witnessed or participated in the intensity of the Senior Spoon Game. We have all experienced some crazy late-night shenanigans in our dorms. Together we all have reveled in Blue victory and grieved Blue loss. We are the student body of Phillips Academy during the 2005-2006 school year; and we have perfected Code Blue.

Dorm Life

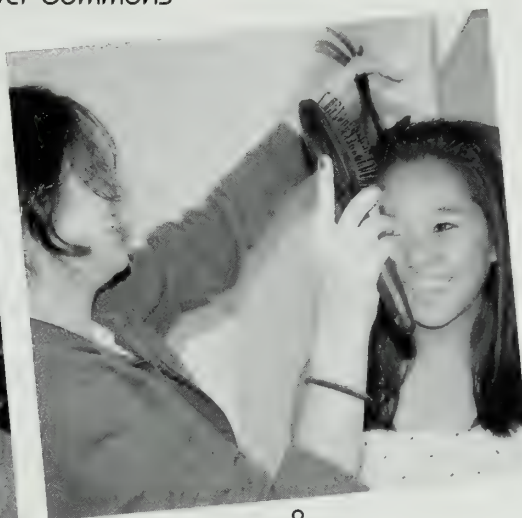

Whether singing Happy Birthday at a cupcake munch, or prolonging bedtime until the wee hours of the morning for the sake of roommate bonding, Andover students never fail to take full advantage of the boarding life. As new students, we are constantly reminded that the transition away from home will be difficult. For most, however, the experience of living with the people that you run, study, procrastinate, dine, or relax in Ryley with is incomparable to anything we have experienced before. Boarding life not only fills the void of, but also has the potential to surpass, the life of home-cooked meals and parental supervision that we chose to leave behind in coming to Andover Hill. On second thought, maybe Commons doesn't quite meet the culinary standards that we grew up with – but the effort that house counselors and cluster deans put into pie and mac 'n' cheese munches goes beyond compensating for whatever Commons lacks in quality.

Andover Athletics

Athletics at Andover are unlike athletics at any other high school. Not only is the way we watch our sports games different from other schools', but the way we participate in games is unique as well. We do not have cheerleaders or star players. We do not have competitions about "which team is more hard-core." Our motto of Non Sibi permeates our track, pool, fields, courts, and rinks. Not that the Andover athlete needs any assistance, but to increase team unity and encourage team bonding, coaches hold team dinners and captains orchestrate team psyches before games. The delicious food and silly pre-game behavior has a magical effect on team unity that few can explain. Many Andover athletes will also note that long bus or rally wagon rides are crucial in building friendships with teammates. The sports experience at Andover is also unique in that athletes play, eat, learn, and live with their teammates. The surprisingly small amount of annoyance this fosters in teams is evidence that the Andover student and the Andover athlete is an amazing friend and devoted companion no matter what.

I think Lacrosse could be one of the best sports because you can hit people, whack them with a stick, whip a ball as hard as you can at someone, and even when you're exhausted you want to keep on with it. I think if you can tolerate someone constantly hitting you with a stick, you should be able to tolerate just about everything else off the field.

The girls' varsity tennis team had a very successful season this spring. With three returning players and the addition of very talented new players, the girls worked hard, played tons of good tennis, and had a lot of fun. Tennis is a very individual sport but the team was dedicated and cheered each other on to many close victories. Between playing with foam balls at practice, doing yoga, and playing Olympics, this spring has been a great season.

Without Mike's relaxed attitude and leadership, Trey's stories about the South, Foster's sarcasm, Schubie's ridiculously hard swing, and Chan's silence, this season would have just been average. Instead, this turned into the best season of my four years here. Yea, we played amazing tennis and dominated throughout the ladder, but the people on the team mattered more. I would like to thank every person on Varsity A and B for making this a great year.

This season we went beyond all expectations. This particular team truly gave 100% every game and had fun no matter what. We knew that when the game was over, win or lose, we did the best we could do. It turns out that our attitude couldn't have been better. Going into the Big East Tournament we had a 10-2 record and happened to be down two key players, yet we persevered and came in second place; that's what I will always remember about this team.

I was very proud of the progress our team made this year. With only 3 seniors and 4 returning players, Tom (Dignard, co-captain) and I had a hard job of managing and developing all of the new-comers. Every member of the team made a contribution to our team's success, and as disappointing as it was to lose Andover-Exeter in 16 innings, I think the way we played that game was a sign of our team's character and determination that Tom and I saw throughout the whole year.

- 1 Chris Bramwell '07 swings and hits to give his team another homerun.

We had quite a season this spring, rowing on the Merrimack. With a gold and two silver medals won at Interschols, the Andover Girls Crew team has a lot to be proud of. Even though we encountered a few obstacles along the way (stomach viruses, flooded rivers, and canceled races) our resilience and toughness got us through. This season was an adventure that I will never forget.

Golf is well, golf, for better or for worse. Personally, I am obsessed with it. We dress up every day in our khaki pants and collared shirts and prance around a perfectly mown area of green for 2 to 3 hours. Afterwards, if its a gorgeous sunny day, we stop by Dairy Queen for our hard earned blizzards and ice cream cones, coaches treat of course. This year, unlike any other year, we used this method to guide us towards an unheard of unbeaten match play record and two tournament trophies, both of which involved crushing archrival Exeter. No one will ever be able to say '06 golf did not go out on top. I'm going to miss PA golf. It has been one heck of a ride.

I couldn't be more proud and honored to be part of the Andover Track Team. I am amazed at what the team has accomplished during my years here and how we have all developed as athletes and as people. We have pushed ourselves to the limit again and again. Because of that drive we have had many successes. We leave as Interschols Champions for both boys and girls, an amazing feat we earned through sheer determination and hard work.

1 Colin Calabrese '06 puts on his game face in the midst of a jump.

2 Mike Donelan '08 takes a rest after clearing the pole.

4 Mario Noyola '06 throws the javelin forcefully.

5 Sean Hamilton '07, Ben Bramhall '07 and Mike Discenza '09 speed through the crowd.

Martha Schnure '06

This year's girls' track team was the most talented group of girls our program has seen in years. We've placed second to Exeter at Interschols for the past five years, but this year we blew them out of the water and became the 2006 NEPSTA Champions! It speaks volumes of our depth as a team that we placed at least once in every one of the seventeen events at Interschols—a feat unmatched by any other team. We had an unusually young, talented team this year, and I think I speak for everyone when I say that this is the first of many championships for us.

- 1 Atima Lui '08 clears the bar with a great jump.
- 2 Aba Temeng '06 prepares to throw the discus.
- 3 Martie Schnure sprints to the finish line
- 4 Ola Canty '07 prepares for her race.
- 5 Colleen Thurman '07 shows that great formation is the way to go.

Peter Kalmakis '06
With only four returning players, I wasn't sure how our season would turn out. Ms. Fenton's announcement this winter that ultimate was to become a varsity sport definitely helped draw some great athletes to the team. Ultimate is probably the only varsity sport where future starters were learning fundamentals during try-outs! Great coaching, amazing team chemistry and spirit, and a heck of a lot of athleticism soon turned this group of newcomers into the New England Prep School Ultimate League Champions

- 1 Trevor Sanders '07 reaches to throw the disk
- 2 Ben Feng '07 intercepts the disc.
- 3 Danny Silk '07 attempts to get around his opponent
- 4 Captain Peter Kalmakis '06 gets back into position.
- 5 Wesley Hartwell '07 and a team member battle for the disc.

Arielle Filiberti '07

With a mix of returning riders and new talent, this season was very promising. After the first race, it was obvious Andover's Girl's A team would dominate for the rest of the season. The girls placed first in team standings for every single race, making them the undisputed Girls' A New England Champions. The boys faced more competition, but still managed to have a solid season and some impressive results. With many of the strongest riders returning for next year, the boys look to establish themselves at the top of the league, and the girls to maintain their position.

- 1 Berol Dewdney '09 and Arielle Filiberti '07 pose along the race course
- 2 On The Road
- 3 Colin Touhey '06 and Andy Clay '08 stop for a break
- 4 Berol Dewdney '09 and Lilli Stein '07 get some water
- 5 The team gets pumped for their upcoming race.

We had a very fun and impressive season this year. Last year we finished seventh in New England, but this year we improved to fifth place. We beat Deerfield in the last game of the tournament 15-4. We played really well as a team; our energy was high throughout the game, and we were determined to win. We have three Seniors graduating but there are three rising Seniors who will lead next year's team. Overall, I was very happy with the talent and determination we possessed this year.

Howie Kalter '06

This year the boys' volleyball team had the best season in the program's history. The boys in blue were able to come away with three huge victories in the beginning of the season against our only opponents. In the end-of-season tournament at Loomis we came away with second place even though our starting setter, Peter Yao, was injured in the first match. I think that it proved how well we could adapt as a team, our team was deep enough to still be successful. Next season should also be a successful one.

something wonderful has happened to me. i was carried up into the seventh heaven. there all the gods sat assembled. by special grace i was granted the favor of a wish. "Will you," i said, "mercury, I have youth, or beauty, or power, or a long life, or the most beautiful maiden, or any of the other glories we have in our chest? Choose, but only one thing." For a moment I was at a loss. Then I addressed myself to the gods as follows: "Most honorable contemporaries, i choose this one thing, that i may always have the laugh on my side." Not one of the gods said a word, on the contrary, they all began to laugh. Hence i concluded that my request was granted, and found that the gods knew how to express themselves with taste; for it would hardly have been suitable for them to have answered gravely. It is granted thee.

In Loving Memory of Craig Thorn IV

Faculty yearbook photos can be a little slapdash sometimes. Some years you'll see a few closed eyes, cellulitic legs, desultory, unflattering non-poses. I always figured that maybe that year the Pot Pourri staff didn't know those teachers, or didn't care, or were bearing a few grudges. But you won't find an unloving portrait of Craig. I look through them, book after book, and, well, there aren't enough pictures of him. I want to see him again, his approving, merry eyes, his relaxed readiness to laugh, his irresistible clowning from absolutely nothing.

Here's a memory. Craig offers to run recreational tennis for me on the upper varsity courts. We hatch the idea of running it as a cluster intramural. He sets up captains for each team, and confabulates with them before each day's play. He gets them thinking in mythographic terms, with brilliant patter and commentary, keeping careful team and individual score, fomenting rivalries between well-matched boys, between girls and girls, between girls and boys, starting up friendships and even romances that nobody would have guessed between kids who had not noticed each other. As a typical day draws to a close, he fills in for somebody who has finished and hits a few balls and earns oooohs and aaaahs for his big lefty forehand. He pops in a few big serves (incorporating, I can't help noticing, a difficult grip-change I showed him the summer before), shrugs, gets somebody to replace him, and resumes his patter, his "see-you-tomorrows," with nicknames, special references. "Schmertzler, STOP PLAYING! THE PERIOD'S OVER! If you don't get to Amadeus on time, Dr. Warsaw has my permission to smack you with his baton on any presumptive erogenous zone he can find."

-Dr. Greg Wilkin

Eaton Cottage - Winter, 1985 I was listening to WBCN and not studying when the DJ's baritone interrupted the set: "Name three literary allusions by 'The Police.'" The prize - Bruins tickets. Since I harbored a greater love for hockey than anyone else cut from the third team, I raced out of my room. The only pay phone was occupied by a house mate in an impassioned discussion with his soon-to-be-ex-girlfriend. I sprinted downstairs. Craig answered the door to his apartment. "What's up?" "I need to use your phone." He eyed me suspiciously. "Why?" "I just need to." He turned his head: "DREA..." I shot past him and headed for the study. He followed me. "This isn't about the BCN trivia question, is it?" "Maybe," I said, cradling the receiver. He disappeared. I began dialing. Craig's voice came on the line from the bedroom phone: "You know the answer?" "Yeah, hang up." I waited. A stranger's voice announced, "BCN..." "'LOLITA,'" I blurted into the speaker, "'Don't Stand So Close To Me'... 'King Lear,' 'King of Pain,' and..." I paused. I didn't have a third. Craig stood in the doorway. Humiliated, I hung up. Craig's gaze combined empathy with reproach. I uttered an insincere "sorry" and sulked upstairs. A week later, I came back from class and found a note pinned to my door. It read: "'Faust' - 'Wrapped Around Your Finger.'" Underneath the note, two tickets bore the logo of the Boston Bruins. That was Craig.
